ATHLETES HAVE BIG FIELD DAY AT JAMESTOWN

Great Program With Leading Amateurs of the Country Taking Part.

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 7.—The championship events in the Amateur Athletic union annual field and track championships being held upon the athletic field of the Jamestown exposition were contested for this afternoon.

Some of the most noted athletes in the country and Canada are entered. The events this afternoon included the 100-yard dash in which only first place men were allowed, that is, men who have won races in this class.

This was followed by the 220-yard dash and the 440-yard dash, or the quarter-mile run. In addition there were the hurdles for each of the above distances, followed by the half-mile run, the mile run and the five-mile run. Other events included throwing the hammer, putting the sixteen-pound shot, hurling the discus, pole-vault, running, high and broad jumps.

The weather is still clear and not too hot and everything was auspicious for the great senior events this afternoon which close the annual field and track championships.

There was a large attendance and many new arrivals from different parts of the country came this morning for the championship contests.

H. J. Huff, Chicago Athletic association, won the 100-yard run in the senior championship of Amateur Athletic union events today, defeating James Kelley, of the University of Oregon, the former champion, and Charles Harlans, of the Olympic club, San Francisco. W. D. Eaton, of the Boston Athletic association, was a close second. Time, 10 1-5 seconds.

The half-mile run was easily won by M. W. Shepherd, Irish-American Athletic club of New York city, the present champion for this distance; Andrew Glarnor, of the Olympic club, San Francisco, second; Frank Steppano, of South Boston, Mass., third. Time, 1 minute 55 1-5 seconds. This beats Shepherd's former record by one-fifth of a second.

In the 16-pound shot put Ralph Rose, Olympic club of California, broke the world's record by half an inch. His put was 49½ feet, ½ inch; W. W. Cook, Boston A. A. C., was second with 45 feet, 2 inches; W. Gilmore, Olympic club, San Francisco, third, with 43 feet, 7 inches.

WELLMAN MAY HAVE TO POSTPONE HIS DASH TO POLE

Paris, Sept. 7.—In the Echo de Paris this morning, M. Robert Chauvelot reports his last interview with Walter Wellman. He says the question whether or not the aeronaut will start for the pole will soon be answered. When he left Mr. Wellman the wind was blowing strong from the north. The American explorer stated that unless there was a south wind by Sept. 19 his attempt would be abandoned for this year, for then the Polar night commences.

"We cannot leave," added Mr. Wellman, "for a north wind would drive us south of the archipelago and an east wind up to Greenland. I want to reach the pole and not commit suicide."

If, therefore, Mr. Wellman does not find a wind favorable before Sept. 10, he will deflate his balloon and bring it to Paris to wait till August of next year to make his start.

HOOSIER STATE TO FAIRBANKS WILL BE TRUE

So Declares Scout Jim Goodrich to Westerners—No Use for Taft.

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 7.—J. P. Goodrich, of Indiana, republican national committeeman from Indiana, is making a tour of western states in the interest of Fairbanks as a presidential candidate and is holding conferences with prominent republicans in Iowa and Nebraska.

Yesterday Goodrich spent the day in conference with Committeeman Hart, of Iowa, in Council Bluffs. Today he is in Nebraska interviewing prominent republicans.

"There is not even talk that Indiana will be for Fairbanks next year," said Goodrich.

"It is solid for him. Taft will never get Indiana."

JESS HALL WENT IN HEAVY ON MINING SECURITIES

Hooked Up With $315,000 of Company's Cash—Receiver Named.

Chicago, Sept. 7.—The appointment of a receiver for the properties of the Belding-Hall Manufacturing company yesterday followed close upon the heels of the discovery by the creditors of the concern that its missing president, Jesse Hall, had appropriated to his own use at least $315,000 of the corporation's funds.

As far as can be discovered every dollar of this money went into mining stocks, which was backed up with no tangible property, theatrical ventures which have made no money and other securities which the creditors are willing to sell in a lump for something less than $4,000.

Indications yesterday were that Hall would voluntarily return from Canada and that criminal prosecution would be instituted to bring him back to this country by the First National bank, which holds notes of the company aggregating $100,000.

HOME TELEPHONE HERE HAS TAKEN NO ACTION

But Ruling on Night Rate Elsewhere Will Affect Fort Wayne.

While the Fort Wayne Home Telephone and Telegraph company has taken no action regarding the abolition of the night rate on long distance business and the reduction of the time limit from five minutes to three minutes, action of other independent companies in Indiana and Ohio will have its effect on Fort Wayne business.

Some time ago the Ohio companies reduced the time limit from five minutes to three minutes and now the Indianapolis independent company has followed this action and abolished the night rate as well. Similar action has also been taken by the Wabash Home Telephone company and by several other independent 'phone companies in Indiana. It is said that the Fort Wayne company has not yet given the matter any consideration.

However, it will be compelled to enforce the three-minute regulation upon patrons who are talking to Ohio and Indiana points, where lines other than those of the Fort Wayne company are used for a part of the distance. The new regulations go into effect September 10.

TWO KINDERGARTENS TO HOLD AFTERNOON SESSIONS

Will be Tried at Jefferson and Hanna Schools—Ready for Work.

Two of the kindergartens connected with the Fort Wayne public schools will hold afternoon, instead of morning sessions, at least during the first semester, which starts with the opening of the city schools on Monday next.

The kindergartens thus affected are those at the Hanna and the Jefferson buildings. All the other kindergartens will hold their morning sessions as heretofore. The afternoon experiment was tried for a time at the Hanna school last year, and it proved entirely successful.

Teachers Get Assignments.

Teachers of the public schools assembled in the old high school building at 3 o'clock this afternoon, and Superintendent J. N. Study made the formal announcement assigning the instructors to the various buildings for the coming year.

It is understood that there will be comparatively few changes this year, and though some annoyance has been caused by the resignation of teachers at a late date, the places have been filled without serious difficulty.

While the addition to the Nebraska building is not complete, other portions of the building are available, and school will open in the Nebraska building as well as in other buildings of the city on Monday morning.

Olcott formed in this city the society which has since grown to such proportions. Now that these two are dead, Mrs. Besant is looked upon as the leading Theosophist in the world. YOUTH'S SPREE THE CAUSE OF HIS KILLING

St. Louis Lad, Drunk, Attacks His Father, Who Stabs Him.

St. Louis, Sept. 7.—Locked up in a cell at the police station awaiting the coroner's inquest, Christian Kelley, sr., 47 years of age, grieves over the death of his son, whom he stabbed to death last night. The son, Christian Kelley, jr., 20 years old, came home last night under the influence of liquor and was reprimanded by the father. It is claimed by the father that the son attacked him with a chair and in the struggle the elder Kelley in self-defense stabbed his son with a pocket-knife. The son fell to the floor and died soon after. The tragedy occurred in the presence of the young man's mother and sister.

FEAR TROUBLE WILL MARK WINTER IN IRELAND

British Government Apprehensive—Constabulary is Doubted.

Dublin, Sept. 7.—That the government is apprehensive with regard to the coming winter in Ireland, and is doubtful regarding the loyalty of the constabulary since the Belfast agitation, is revealed in the present strenuous efforts to recruit the force. The number of the constabulary has been steadily decreasing for the past four years. The authorities have set aside a part of the Dublin military barracks as additional quarters for the men and to the constables and officers throughout the country there has been sent a circular instructing them to make haste to secure suitable candidates.

NEW QUEEN OF ALL THE SEAS NOW COMING

Monster Lusitania Starts From Liverpool on Her Maiden Voyage.

Liverpool, Sept. 7.—The people of this city and its vicinity today concentrated their attention on what was considered to be an epoch making event—the departure of the giant Cunard line steamer Lusitania, the largest of the Atlantic liners, on her maiden voyage to New York. Additional interest was given to the event in that the Lucania leaves port at 4:20 this afternoon, about two and one-half hours earlier than the Lusitania, making possible a trial of speed across the Atlantic between the swiftest ocean steamer, with reciprocating engines, flying the British flag, and the largest turbine steamer. The Lucania has 730 cabin passengers and the Lusitania 975.

Services for Rosh Hashonah, or the Jewish New Year, will be held at the synagogue Sunday evening at 7:30 and Monday morning at 10 o'clock. Evening sermon topic: "The Backward, Inward, and Forward Look for Us Personally." Morning topic: "The Backward, Inward, and Forward Look for Us Historically."

SLAUGHTERED WIFE AND THEN KILLED HIMSELF

Wealthy Retired Broker in Chicago Commits Horrible Crime.

Chicago, Sept. 7.—Mrs. Fred M. Fish, the wife of a wealthy retired broker, was found murdered in her home at 423 Davis street, Evanston, Ill., early today. Her husband with his throat cut was found unconscious on the floor of the room in which the body of Mrs. Fish was lying. It is the opinion of the police that Fish murdered his wife and then attempted to commit suicide. He was hurried to a hospital, but has not yet recovered consciousness, and it is doubtful if he survives sufficiently to make a statement.

Mr. and Mrs. Fish were heard by their neighbors in a violent altercation late last night, and it is believed that Fish arose early today and after discharging a shotgun into his wife's head, hacked her in a horrible fashion with a butcher's cleaver. A servant girl who was in the house declared that she heard the report of a shotgun early this morning and the cleaver with which Mrs. Fish was mangled was found lying beside the bed.

Fish had been for twenty years associated with a prominent commission house which recently retired from business. He was in poor health, and for some time had suffered periodical attacks of despondency.

It was developed by the physicians at the hospital that Fish will undoubtedly recover from the wound in his throat. Late today he was removed to a sanitarium. Physicians say he is insane.

SHOOT FOR PALMA TROPHY.

American Rifle Team Makes Record-Breaking Score.

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 7.—Shooting for the Palma trophy began today at Rockliffe range at the 500-yards range. The light was good. There are three ranges, 500, 600 and 1,000 yards.

The American team made 530 out of a possible 600 at the 500-yard range. This is the highest score ever made.

Captain Semon and Captain Casey each made a possible 75, or 15 bullseyes.

First half of the 900-yard range has been fired. The United States leads with 287; Australia, second, with 277; Canada, third, 276; Great Britain, fourth, 267.

Score at 900 yards—The United States, 576; Australia, 553; Canada, 554; Great Britain, 526.

At both ranges the United States team made 1,163; Australia, 1,123; Canada, 1,120; Great Britain, 1,077.

The United States has only lost thirty-seven points in a possible score of 1,200 and is forty points ahead of Australia, which stands next.

FARM HAND HANGED HIMSELF IN A BARN

James Carter, South of City, Used a Rope to End His Existence.

James Carter, 63 years of age, employed on the farm of W. A. Fairfield, four miles south of the city, committed suicide today by hanging himself in a cow stable on the Fairfield farm. His lifeless body was discovered suspended from a rafter by means of a rope at noon, when Carter did not respond to the bell announcing dinner, and a search was made for the missing man.

Ill-health is ascribed as the cause of Carter's suicide, and it is said that he had threatened to kill himself, though no one was inclined to regard his statements of this kind seriously. He was last seen alive about the premises at 8 o'clock, when he left the house, but there was nothing in his action to indicate that he contemplated self-destruction.

Was Almost on Knees.

Carter, unobserved, had gone to the cow stable and taken a small rope, such as is used in tying the cattle in their stalls. By means of the iron ring in one end of the rope he made a slip noose and placed it about his neck, tying the other end about a rafter in the barn.

The structure was so low that Carter could hardly stand upright, and that he was determined to die is shown by the fact that when found his feet were touching the floor of the stable, but he had stooped in order to make the job effective until his knees were almost upon the floor also.

The discovery of the man's body was made by John Horn, another employe of the farm, who began the search when Carter did not respond to the summons of the dinner bell at noon. Entering the cow stable Horn found the lifeless body of the man hanging in one of the stalls. It is believed he must have hanged himself about 9 o'clock.

Seemed Much Worried.

Little more than a week ago, it is said, Carter was taken sick, though his condition was not believed to be serious. A few days later Mr. and Mrs. Fairfield left for a visit with friends in Northern Michigan, and their absence plainly worried Carter, who is said to have arisen in the night and talked about committing suicide. Mr. and Mrs. Fairfield are yet absent, and the farm was left in the care of employes.

Carter had been employed on the Fairfield farm about six months, and is said to have been without bad habits. He was a carpenter by occupation, and had been married, but there had been estrangement and husband and wife have not lived together for some years. It is said that the wife resides at Maysville. There is one son in Fort Wayne and several other children in the west.

After Coroner Stults' investigation into the case the remains of the dead man were brought to the Klaehn & Melching undertaking rooms in this city.

DINING CAR THIEVES ARE ARRESTED IN CHICAGO

Four Men Who Were Disguised as Women When Looting are Held.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 7.—Four men thought to be implicated in a series of robberies in dining cars, committed while they were wearing women's clothing, were arrested last night in a raid on an apartment building at Twenty-third street and Wabash avenue. The men were taken with thousands of dollars worth of plunder said to have been stolen from dining cars and expensive dresses that are supposed to have been worn on the thieving expeditions.

L. J. St. Cloud, known as the alleged ring-leader, for four years was a cook on the "Diamond special" of the Illinois Central. He was discharged, last March. His companions are August C. Klinger, Edward Mortimer and Louis Thomas. St. Cloud rented the flat in the apartment building some time ago.

The police believe they can connect the men with numerous robberies that were suppose to have been committed by women.

ARE GETTING AFTER TOM TAGGART'S SCALP

Local Members of Legislature Invited to Attend Minority Conference.

The democratic members of the last legislature have been invited to meet at the Grand hotel at Indianapolis next Wednesday evening with the leaders of their party. The Allen county members are included. It is admitted that the purpose of this meeting will be to consider the good of their party, including the election of a new man in place of Hon. William H. O'Brien as the head of the state committee.

The call for the meeting originated in a suggestion by Representative Green, of Perrysburg, floor leader of the minority of the last house. Also by Representative Downey, of Shelbyville. The call was signed by Senator Ranke and Representative Wells, of this county. The local members will attend.

The meeting will be especially important as it involves the attempted elimination of Tom Taggart from party control in Indiana and as Taggart is chairman of the democratic national committee, politicians all over the country will have their ears open for the result.

LEVY MUST BE RAISED IF ESTIMATES ARE ALLOWED

County Council Finishes Work of Pruning the Amounts Asked.

If the estimate agreed upon by the county council are allowed for the expenses of 1908 it will be necessary to make a slight increase in the county levy, which was last year 28.65 for county expenses and run up to 47.65 by the amount needed for new bridges and to pay the interest on outstanding bonds.

The total estimated by the council for expenses is $830,668.61, which includes $6,300 to pay the salary of the county clerk, $6,200 for the sheriff, $3,500 for the recorder, $3,700 for the prosecutor, $12,000 for the maintenance of the poor and $5,000 for ditch repairs, all of which will not be needed as the fees of these offices will pay the salaries and the ditch and poor funds will be returned.

Appropriations were increased by the necessity of a new bridge at Clinton street, which will cost $32,000, and the expense of primary elections under the new law which will amount to $16,000. The county council finished going through the estimates and adjusting them this afternoon but had not decided upon a levy. Each member took a copy of the appropriations and will look it over before the levy will be finally made.

The executive board of Hope hospital will hold a joint meeting with the hospital staff Monday evening for the general good of the institution. Just what business will come up is not known, but several conditions now existing will be improved.

FLEMING LANDED HIS MAN.

Ben Osborn Did Not Want to Submit to Being Arrested.

Deputy Fish and Game Commissioner R. D. Fleming left for Warsaw today in charge of Ben Osborn, who is wanted on half a dozen charges, several of which are for violating the game laws. Osborn was arrested in Bloomingdale yesterday afternoon and refused to accompany the officer, placing his hand on his hip pocket. He was covered with a revolver and after he had changed his mind about going he got out of a buggy in which he was sitting and attempted to get hold of a brick, but was deterred by a mace that was drawn over his head.

William L. Benedict took a hand in the argument and advised Osborn not to accompany the officer and Fleming says Benedict threatened to get a revolver, but changed his mind. After another argument Osborn was in a frame of mind to go without further trouble when a junk dealer named Wagner butted in and caused more turmoil. Upon his return from Warsaw Fleming says he will file affidavits against both Benedict and Wagner for interfering with an officer in the discharge of his duty. Benedict denies that any part of the trouble took place on his premises.

Since quitting the show business he had lived a retired life, leaving as many cares aside as possible. He was born in this city sixty-five years ago, and started life as an auctioneer with his other brothers and father, eventually entering the show business, traveling from place to place in wagons. A widow and a daughter survive him.

FORMER BASEBALL STAR IN FORT WAYNE PULPIT

Rev. W. A. Sunday at First Presbyterian Church Tomorrow.

One of the most famous evangelists in America, Rev. William A. Sunday, formerly right fielder with the Chicago National league base ball team, will tomorrow morning fill the pulpit of the First Presbyterian church. In his remarkable career, in the course of which he has traveled the length and breadth of the country, he has converted, it is said, a hundred thousand persons to the church and to a better life, and with very few exceptions his converts remain Christians and church members.

One evening, in the year 1888, "Billy" Sunday was sitting on the curbstone of a downtown street in Chicago, together with several other members of the team, when he heard the strains of an organ from a little mission across the way. He left "the gang" to attend the services and came back a Christian. For several years he continued to play with the National league, usually filling a pulpit on Sunday, as there were then no Sunday ball games. In 1893 he gave up ball playing to devote his whole time to evangelistic work and four years ago was received into the Presbyterian ministry.

But the features which have made "Billy" Sunday even more famous are his intense sincerity and his peculiar methods. He occasionally uses the slang and the vernacular of the streets, and counts no words or methods too plebeian for his purpose, believing that the end justifies the means. The service tomorrow morning will be held at 10:30 instead of 11 o'clock, as has been the custom.

SENSIBLE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY DAMES.

As wits, theologians, politicians and writers, the women of a hundred and fifty or sixty years ago were certainly in advance of those of today; yet apparently they had no wish to push man from his proper place. They held no anti-matrimonial views. They made good mothers, they were excellent housewives, they were socially charming, they managed to be personally attractive. In many directions they had the advantage of us.—Lady Pictorial.

MOORS BEG A TRUCE TO NEGOTIATE PEACE

Ask French to Suspend Hostilities—Trick is Suspected.

Paris, Sept. 7.—A special dispatch from Casablanca received today announced that the various Moorish tribes around that place had asked General Drude, the French commander, to suspend hostilities for the purpose of negotiating peace. The general, the dispatch says, agreed to remain inactive until tomorrow when he will march on Taddert.

The correspondent who sent the dispatch says it is suspected that the tribesmen in negotiating with the French commander are only seeking to gain time.

EVENTS MARCHING RAPIDLY.

Tangier, Sept. 7.—Events in Morocco are marching on with great rapidity. Yesterday both the sultans, Abdel-Aziz and Mulai Hafig, were reported to be leaving the rival capitals, Fez and Morocco City, at the head of armies which had been levied in hot haste and which may decide within a fortnight the destiny of Morocco monarchy. The immediate objective of these forces is the ancient city of Rabat, on the Atlantic seaboard, the prior possession of which the greater center of Islam's life probably would have an important if not a decisive bearing upon the struggle for supremacy.

GERMANY'S REPLY TO FRANCE.

Berlin, Sept. 7.—Germany's reply to France's circular note to the signatories of the Algeciras convention will not be drawn up before Monday next.

It is understood in the most influential quarters that Germany will not give a negative reply to the suggestion that the international Moroccan police be temporarily constituted from purely French and Spanish elements.

Some reserves, however, will certainly be made on the subject. It is fully understood here that the present situation at Casablanca and Mazagan was not foreseen at the time the Algeciras convention was drawn up and requires to be specially dealt with, but Germany will consent for the moment to rely on French loyalty to the engagements entered into.

No limitation therefore is likely to be placed on the French military movement so long as they are considered to be necessary for the security of Europeans and of the Moroccan ports.

TELEPHONE COMPANY IS UNABLE TO ANSWER THE CITY

Directors Are Out of Town and Full Board Meeting is Imposible.

The Home Telephone and Telegraph company was unable to get enough of the directors together this morning to decide upon the question of permitting the use of its poles for stringing wires for the new municipal lighting plant and an answer to have been delivered to Mayor Hosey and the board of public works this afternoon was delayed until Monday.

The officers of the company and the city officials held a meeting yesterday afternoon in an effort to adjust the differencess and an agreement was made to submit the matter to the directors. The question of the right of the city to use the poles is at issue and if it is allowed to string the wires the company thinks it ought to be relieved of the burden of pole tax.

Can Raise Salaries.

City Attorney Guy Colerick decided that the council has the right to raise the salaries of the policemen and the matter is up to the board of public works. The members are willing, but can not see where their estimates can be so arranged unless the levy is raised.

NOTES OF THE DAY.

During the calendar year of 1906 the trust companies of the state of New York earned profits of 40 per cent. on their capital. They declared $11,060,000 in dividends and added $14,820,000 to surplus. The average dividend was about 19 per cent. Thirty-seven New York city banks during the same year earned about 25 per cent. on their capital.

The New York World figures that John D. Rockefeller has made public gifts up to the present of $102,055,000. Of this amount $44,000,000 has been given to the general and southern educational boards, $22,000,000 to the University of Chicago, $15,000,000 to church and missionary work and $2,000,000 to the Rockefeller institute.

Magnets for lifting purposes are coming into increasing use in British iron works. Castings weighing two or three tons are lifted by electromagnets. Much time is saved in comparison with the use of hooks and other devices, as the throwing of a switch energizes the magnet.

NEW BIRTH CERTIFICATES.

Two Certificates, a General and a Supplementary One Now Required.

In accordance with a law passed by the last legislature which is to go into effect on the first of October, Dr. Van Buskirk now has on hands a large supply of the new birth certificates which he will mail or give to all doctors and mid-wifes. They are more detailed than heretofore and two are required for each case. The eneral one is to be sent in to the office of gthe county health officer within twenty days after date of birth and the other as soon as the child has been named. It is after the case according to the present arrangement that the name of the child is omitted for lack of one. The supplementary certificate is for the name. It may often prove the means of identification of a person when the child grows older. It will also help the United States census office.

WAS FORMER TEACHER IN FORT WAYNE SCHOOLS

Mrs. Minnie Belle (Felts) Daigneau is Dead—Other Deaths.

Mrs. Minnie Belle (Felts) Daigneau, formerly a teacher in the Fort Wayne schools and widely and favorably known in this city, died at 4 o'clock this morning at her home in Benton Harbor, Mich. She was the wife of Floyd Daigneau, a prominent business man at Benton Harbor, and was the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Felts, residing at 1444 Clifton avenue, Fort Wayne.

News of her death is a most distressing shock to a very large number of warm friends in Fort Wayne. Mrs. Daigneau had not been in the best of health for some months, and on Monday of this week a son was born to the family, and complications ensuing terminated in the death of the young mother. The babe survives.

Mrs. Daigneau was born in Benton Harbor, Mich., in 1876, but came with her parents to Fort Wayne some years ago. She took training in kindergarten work in this city, and for five years was engagen with unusual success as an instructor in this department of public school work, two years at the Harmer school and three years at the Hoagland school.

Her marriage to Mr. Daigneau occurred in this city October 31, 1905, and since that time she had resided in Benton Harbor, where her husband is a member of an old and prominent family. Mrs. Daigneau was a young woman of fine intellect and beautiful character who was greatly beloved by all who knew her. Her mother was at her bedside for some days before her death, and the father, who is a traveling salesman, was located at Kendallville Friday and reached Benton Harbor some hours before her death. Surviving relatives include the husband and baby son in addition to the parents and a brother in this city. Mrs. Daigneau was a communicant of Trinity Episcpal church in this city.

ROOSEVELT IS BOUND TO FORCE NOMINATION OF TAFT

Lieutenant-Governor Chanler of New York, Boomed as Democratic Leader.

Washington, Sept. 7.—There is a great deal of interest manifested here among republican politicians as to the character of speeches the President will make on his southern tour. He is scheduled to make five talks and it is known that he put a great deal of his time in on them at Oyster Bay this summer. Whether the speeches will be academic, or what might be called political, is what a good many people, with Wall street connections, would like to know. As yet no one, not even the ubiquitous Loeb, has an inkling as to what the president has on his mind.

The politicians who have been opposing Taft, have just awakened to the fact that the president seriously intends to force his nomination on the party. There will be 992 delegates in the next republican national convention and 497 will be enough to nominate. The South will furnish 332 of these delegates in the shape of federal office holders. The delegates from the territories, twenty-six in number, will be of the same stripe. West of the Mississippi there will be something like 156 delegates, every one of them a Roosevelt man. With this aggregation all the president will have to do is press the button and the convention will do the rest. At this time it looks as if Taft was as good as nominated.

It is suspected that one reason why the President is going to make these five speeches is to pave, in some fashion, the way to this result. The proceeding is a little high handed, even for Roosevelt, and needs a little softening.

The democrats in the south are alive to what is going on and they intend to line up this time behind a live candidate. It is expected that when President Roosevelt visits the South Lieutenant-Governor Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler, of New York state, will also be there. Governor Chanler has been invited to make a Southern trip by some of the most influental democrats in the south. Since the candidacy of Chanler for the presidency has been announced the democratic leaders in the south, who have been at the capital, have taken very kindly to it.

Chanler's father came from a most distinguished southern family. He married the daughter of John Jacob Astor, and made his home in New York, where he won fame as a lawyer.

In this sense the Southerners look upon Chanler as one of their own. They feel that this is not the time to ask the democratic convention to name a man who lives in the South for president, so, in rallying to the support of Chanler, they are doing the next best thing.

Chanler will not disappoint his Southern audiences. He has a pleasing personality, stands over six feet and is a fiery orator when he gets a going.

His visit to the South will stand out in vivid contrast to the one made by Senator David Bennett Hill, of New York on his memorable hunt for Southern delegates a dozen years ago. Hill was cold and calculating and never for a moment could he get away from the business that took him South.

Chanler is a good mixer. He is as chivalrous as a Bayard, and while he will keep his eye open for anything that "is doing" politically, he can be relied upon to measure up to the requirements demanded of a Southern gentleman.

It is predicted here that when Governor Chanler gets through with the south he will have the delegates of every state that goes to make up the "solid South" with him.

The candidacy of Chanler has given the democrats a waking up. It has brought all of the fighting men in the party to the front and they now talk hopefully of winning. Of course, the fact that Chanler is a millionaire may have something to do with that. Politicians are known to be much more eager for battle when they see a shadow of the "long green" even in the distance. Be this as it may, Chanler is a force in the democratic party and will continue to grow from now on.

An automatic chain-making machine has been perfected. A steel bar is drawn in at one end of the machine, issuing at the other end in the form of a steel-link chain completely assembled. In the process of manufacturing none of the metal is lost, the weight of the chain on completion being exactly that of the metal before manufacture.

SOCIETY

The younger members of society have kept the reputation of their home city up to the high mark established many years ago for hospitality to visitors. Not only has there been much going on this week, but there would have been as much again had there been more days to give teas on and more evenings to dance, or motor or otherwise entertain with parties. Now comes a lull because some visitors have gone home and college boys and girls must needs get themselves ready to depart for their respective schools and colleges, though few have to leave before the middle or last of this month. The coming week will interest many because of the numerous weddings which are to take place, and there will still be a few entertainments for the brides.

* * *

Miss Helene Siemon and Rev. Herman Brauer will be married on Wednesday evening, Sept. 11, at 6 o'clock at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Henry J. Meyer. Miss Siemon comes from a fine family, for many years known in this city. Since the death of her parents, Miss Siemon has made her home much of the time in St. Louis with relatives, but for a number of months has lived with Mr. and Mrs. Meyer. The groom's father, Rev. Carl Brauer, of Chicago, will officiate. Miss Lydia Brauer, of Chicago, and Miss Clara Schmidt, of Concordia place, will be the bridesmaids. Miss Siemon is a cultured and lovely young woman who has many friends, not only in Lutheran circles, but among people not of that church. The wedding will be a quiet one and the guests will be relatives and very near friends. This evening Mrs. Meyer will entertain a few young people in honor of the bride-elect.

* * *

Thursday will be a busy day for the brides of the week. The weddings of Miss Ida Pearl Kickley and Mr. Albert Bowser, Miss Adele Schwartz and Mr. Ralph W. Mentzer and Miss Nora Reinewald and Mr. Fred Meyers will take place on that day.

* * *

Miss Edith Monahan assisted Miss Fannie Matson at her home this afternoon in entertaining the Psi Alpha Gamma girls in honor of Miss Pearl Kickley whose marriage to Albert Bowser will take place the coming week. The guests found a spider web of string to unravel and at each end of the string hidden in different places was attached a kitchen utensil for the bride to be. The rooms were very pretty in their decoration of garden flowers and potted plants. In the diningroom a rainbow color scheme was carried out, different colors being shown in the candles which were under "rainbow" shades, and in other decoration. At supper Miss Kickley easily found her place as her chair was decorated with a bouquet of golden glow. There were invited to the affair Miss Lillian Meyer, of Toledo; Miss Aimee Kaufman, of Baltimore, and Misses Mabel Wood, Edna Mull, Daisy Striker, Millie Winkelmeyer, Irene Comparet, May Hallenstein and Mrs. Edgar Pfeiffer.

* * *

Miss Josephine Dinnen gave an informal pedro party last evening as a compliment to her guest, Miss Marguerite Cooper, of Indianapolis. Pink asters, zinnias and dahlias in shades of pink and red formed an artistic decoration in the parlors. In the diningroom the coloring was yellow, marigolds supplying the most of that color. Punch was served from a bowl decorated with grapevine and bunches of green grapes and the refreshments showed the same pretty colors as the decorations. Prizes at pedro were won by Miss Helen Peters and Budd Van Sweringen for high scores and Miss Cooper received the guest's prize.

* * *

A little thimble party of yesterday for Miss Kickley was given by Miss Verne Bowser, at her home on East Creighton avenue. The appointments were especially pretty with the colors of yellow and white predominating. The supper table was decorated with yellow ribbons that extended from the chandelier to the corners of the table. Narrower ribbons of the same color started at the center where yellow and white flowers filled basket and ended at individual places. Yellow baskets filled with candies were favors. Other guests were Mrs. Edmund Hamilton, formerly Miss Helen Waterman, Mrs. Edgar Pfeiffer, Mrs. Harry Bowser, Mrs. Jules Simon, Miss Eva Bowser and Miss Cherrill Drunkenbrod.

* * *

Miss Eliza Hanna has issued invitations to a tea which she will give on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in honor of Miss Helen Harper, who will leave soon for Rockford, Ill., to attend Rockford college.

* * *

Miss Mabel and Miss Venette Sites have issued invitations to a card party which they will give on Wednesday afternoon at their home on West Wayne street.

THE NEED OF COMPANIONSHIP.

There is a wise old German saying that "Only a god or a brute can dwell in solitude." Men and women need congenial companionship, both for the sake of health and happiness. Just as your lungs, after using up all the oxygen in a close room, need to be filled with fresh, out of door air, so your minds need contact with other minds to get new ideas. There is such a thing as mental as well as physical hunger. Herders on the cattle ranches of the west frequently become mad from isolation they are forced to endure. Women on lonely farms and in small villages grow morbid and mildly insane, and people do not guess that the cause is want of companionship. It is for this reason that a woman's work at home is always more trying than that of her husband, who goes to his office, sees new faces and has the friction that is produced by meeting other people. Even the farmer has more intercourse with his neighbor at market or at the village grocery than his wife, who may not see any one outside of her own family for weeks. It is a great mistake for young people to isolate themselves. Even if their tastes lead them to a quiet life, they should make it a point to cultivate a few agreeable friends.—Woman's Life.

GOLDEN THOUGHTS FOR THE WEEK.

Monday—With many women charity begins at homeliness and does not generally progress further.

Tuesday—Heaven and hell are the two places where everybody has to drop pretences.

Wednesday—Love lieth deep. Love dwelleth not in lip depths.

Love wraps his wings on either side the heart.

Thursday—Men are seldom more innocently employed than when they are honestly making money.

Friday—Is it not enjoying several lives, at least by imagination, to multiply one's personality?

Saturday—To hate nature one must naturally like pictures better than landscapes and preserves better than fruits.

Sunday—I therefore go, and join hand, heart and hand,
Active and firm, to fight the bloodless fight,
Of science, freedom, and the truth in Christ. —Woman's Life.

LITTLE KINGS.

It is a curious fact that most of the principal kings of Europe are shorter than their consorts.

King Edward is six inches shorter than Queen Alexandra. The Tsarina is quite a head taller than the Tsar. The Emperor of Germany is of medium height, but the Empress is tall, and that is why the Kaiser will never consent to be photographed beside his wife unless she sits while he stands, says Home Chat.

The King of Italy hardly comes up to the shoulders of Queen Helena; the King of Portugal, though by no means a little man, is certainly shorter than his wife, and the Queen of Denmark simply towers above her husband.

FLOWERS OF THE MONTH.

January—Snowdrop; expressive of fidelity, hope, purity.

February — Primrose; sincerity, youth.

March—Violet; faithfulness, love, modesty.

April—Daisy; innocence, patience, peace.

May—Hawthorn; hope, happy domestic life.

June—Honeysuckle; fidelity, love, devotion.

July—Water lily; purity of heart, faith.

August—Poppy; consolation.

September—Morning glory; affection, equanimity.

October—Hop; hope.

November—Chrysanthemum; fidelity, love.

December—Holly; domestic happiness, foresight, says Home Notes.

FOUR UNIDENTIFIED MEN.

The Injured.

CRISTEN, TROCCOIN, St. Paul, Minn.
DOUGLAS, J. H., Waterloo, Ia.
EVENSON, THOMAS, Mora, Minn.
KINCH, F., engineer, Cedar Rapids, Ia.
MASON, ALBERT, engineer, Cedar Rapids, Ia.
MARTIN, O. H., mail clerk, West Liberty, Ia.
M'MAHON, H., fireman, Cedar Rapids, Ia.
NEWELL, J. A., Illinois Central conductor, Waterloo, Ia.
SHAW, JOHN, Waterloo, Ia.
O'KEEFE, DR. C. J., Marble Rock, Ia.
STEPPIERRE, EDWARD, Minneapolis, Minn.
WELLIVER, A. L., lineman, Cedar Rapids, Ia.

Of the dead who have not been identified one was wearing a high school pin bearing the letters "H. H. S.," and in a pocket was found a ticket from Lake street, Chicago. He is believed to be Ernest Lovejoy of Faribault, Minn.

Another of the unidentified dead carried a bank book of the National bank of El Reno, Okla. It contains the name of Mrs. Henry Coleman. Another had two souvenir postals of Cedar Rapids, addressed to Misses Frances Spence and Lina Payes, of Hamilton, Ill.

Express Going at High Speed.

The northbound express was ten minutes late at Norris siding, a small station three miles north of Cedar Falls, Ia., and there a southbound freight train was awaiting the express which came thundering along at a terrific speed in an effort to make up time. Just as the engine of the express was about to pass the freight engine the front trucks jumped the track and the engine crashed with terrible force into the engine of the freight, wrecking both engines and telescoping the baggage, mail and smoking cars.

It was among the occupants of the smoking car that the fatalities occurred. The passengers in the two day coaches following the smoker escaped with a violent shaking up.

The dead and injured in the smoking car were tangled in the wreckage of the coach, which presented a ghastly aspect to the first who ran up to the rescue.

Women First to Give Aid.

As nearly all the men on the train had been in the smoker, the first work of rescue devolved on a few women passengers who had escaped injury. One of these, a trained nurse, did heroic service.

The smoking car was crushed like an egg shell by the impact, and it was necessary to use picks and axes to release some of the men. The only person in the car who escaped injury was the newsboy, who was hurled through a hole in the roof and was only slightly bruised.

Injured Doctor a Hero.

Right in the heart of the wreckage was Dr. Charles J. O'Keefe. He did not know that he was fatally injured, and though suffering intense pain, he waved assistance aside and directed the rescuers to others about him who were screaming in agony. By the time Dr. O'Keefe was lifted from the car he was beyond aid.

Physicians and hospital attendants were hastily brought to Norris on a special train made up in this city, and pending their arrival such medical relief as the little station afforded was given the injured.

The injured were brought to Waterloo and placed in the Presbyterian hospital. There it was given out that some of them are in a precarious condition.

He is believed to be the same man who knocked Prill in the head back of Lindenwood cemetery a short time ago and took his money and a revolver. Capt. Henry C. Stoll will also go along, as the man who assaulted Prill pretended he was a Pennsylvania detective.

SOLIDAY FEARS BETTER HALF WILL INJURE BUSINESS

Secures Restraining Order to Prevent it—News of The Courts.

Jacob C. Soliday filed a suit for divorce in the superior court today and secured a restraining order to prevent Minnie C. Soliday, his wife, from molesting him or injuring his business. They were married at Albion in 1884.

He states that she has struck, beaten and called him bad names, threatened to take his life and prevented him from getting trucking orders sent to him over the telephone in order to carry out a threat to put him out of business. They have four children, of whom he asks the custody. He runs an express and trucking business.

Failure to Provide.

Grace Rowell has sued Harry J. Rowell for divorce, alleging that he has failed to support her. They were married Sept. 30, 1895, and lived together until last July. They have two sons, but she does not ask the custody of the children. W. & E. Leonard prepared the complaint.

Mrs. Tanner Asks a Divorce.

In the circuit court Jennie Tanner has filed suit for divorce against John W. Tanner, alleging that they have not lived together for the last five years. They were married in 1899 and she is now conducting a rooming and boarding house and supporting herself. She charges that he called her vile and abasive names and failed to provide for her. P. B. Colerick is her attorney.

Verdict Is Set Aside.

Upon the application of C. M. Niezer, representing Dr. Morse Harrod, a verdict for $2,000 obtained by Mary Bryson last spring was set aside. She claimed that one of her wrists had been permanently injured by unskillful treatment. The application for a new trial was based upon the answers made by the jurymen to some of the interrogatories submitted to them.

Court Notes.

Anna A. Roberts was given a decree of divorce in the circuit court from Jonathan B. Roberts and allowed to resume her maiden name of Ewry.

Judge O. N. Heaton returned last night from Chicago and presided in the superior court today.

If your teeth are fit, chew, chew, chew, until the food is liquid and insists on being swallowed.

If teeth are faulty, soften Grape-Nuts with cream or hot or cold milk and allow to stand a minute soaking.

"There's a reason" as follows:

Grape-Nuts food is in the form of hard and crisp granules, intended to be ground up by the teeth. That work not only preserves the teeth but brings down the saliva, so necessary in the primary work of digestion.

Many people say (and it is true) that when they eat Grape-Nuts they seem able to digest not only that food but other kinds which formerly made trouble when eaten without Grape-Nuts.

CREAMED ONIONS

Peel a quart of medium sized white onions, cover with boiling water, adding a teaspoonful salt for each quart of water.

Boil rapidly ten minutes with the cover partly off, then drain and cover again with fresh boiling water. Cook until tender but not broken, drain and add milk to cover (it will take about half a cup for every six onions). Simmer until quite done, then thicken with a tablespoonful butter rubbed smooth with a tablespoonful of flour. Add salt and pepper to taste, cook, stirring all the time until the sauce is creamy and thickened, then pour into a hot dish to serve. A change may be made by turning the onions, sauce and all into a serving dish that can go into the oven, covering with buttered cracker crumbs, then baking until brown. Still another variation is to cover the top of the cracker crumbs with grated cheese. Onions cooked in this way will be found very delicate and not odorous.

Secretary Taft says we have too many millionaires. Disposed this far to agree with him that we have too many millionaires of the kind we have.

After being four months on the job the Cleveland paving concern has two short streets paved and has another street torn up and out of commission. That may be considered doing pretty well. At all events, it could be a lot worse and so it would be if the prod had not been kept at the board of works as well as the contracting company.

President of the Standard Oil company visited the company's office Thursday for the first time in eight years. In almost any other case this would be called loafing on the job.

Senator Borah, chief counsel for the state in the trial of Undesirable Citizen Haywood has just been indicted by a federal grand jury for participation in land frauds. Mr. Borah was very severe on the anarchy he perceived in the miners' union, but he hasn't yet been heard from on the anarchy that has been seizing millions of acres of the public domain in the far west.

Why howl and rail because Chief of Police Ankenbruck went before the board of commissioners and gave a certificate of character to Manuel Curry, the colored dive-keeper whom the chief of police himself lodged under charges? Is the fact that Ankenbruck is chief of police expected to stifle in his bosom every feeling of kindness and kinship for a brother in business? Too much seems to be expected. Chief ought, though, to go and apologize to Curry for having arrested him.

Much regret to see such spirit of mossbackism in the county council as prevents adoption of voting machines for Allen county. Voting machines are no longer an experiment and Allen county should be as progressive in the matter of their use as she is in other directions. If the score of expense is deterring favorable action, the council should reflect that within a few years the machines will save enough to pay for themselves and future economies will be so much money in the pockets of the people.

Shun Morimato, a member of the Japanese parliament now touring this country, says his nation would like to own the Philippines and would buy those islands if a bargain price could be had, but that Japan does not by any means want the Philippines badly enough to fight for them. Not likely to be any trouble getting a purchaser if the archipelago is really for sale. Meanwhile, the news has reached Manila that the question of selling the islands is being agitated in the United States and has caused much uproar. Natives and Americans alike are opposed to the title passing from America. Any proposition to sell the islands will be vigorously opposed by several congressmen now in Manila. Congressman McKinney says he favors keeping the islands and making a formal declaration of their absolute independence at the end of fifty years.

There may be nothing in it, but it is nevertheless interesting to note that within the past month and especially within a few days there have been more than the usual number of railway wrecks. How far the telegraphers' strike is responsible for this it is impossible to say, but it is not unreasonable to suppose it has had some bearing on the frequency of catastrophes on the rail. Railroads all over the country are more or less short-handed in the matter of telegraphers and here and there a good many non-union railway telegraphers have been picked up by the commercial telegraph companies to take the place of strikers, leaving the railroads more crippled than ever. The wire strike is being felt in many directions and, notwithstanding the corporations say they regard the strike as over, the country is suffering immense embarrassment from the telegraph tie-up.

WOMAN IS FREED AFTER HALF OF LIFE IN A PRISON

Young Bride to Satisfy a Husband's Greed Committed a Murder.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 7.—After serving sixteen years in state's prison—one-half of her life—Mrs. Wilhelmina Baehr was set at liberty yesterday by the pardon of the governor. She entered prison a girl wife, ignorant of the law, unable to speak English. She left it a broken, faded woman. Half of her life had been sacrificed to the greed of a husband old enough to have been her grandfather.

In 1891 Wilhelmina came to Wisconsin from Germany. She was then scarce 15 years old. Her parents took a farm in the woods in Shawano county, and a few months afterward she married a widower named Baehr, because her parents told her to.

Baehr was twenty-five or thirty years her senior and had children older than she. He was known as a grasping man, willing to do anything to get money. Wilhelmina became his household drudge.

Kills at Husband's Command.

One night a traveler, Michael Sells, stopped at the Baehr home for the night. Apparently he had money. The greed of Old Man Baehr was excited and he resolved to put Sells out of the way. Accordingly, he told Wilhelmina to put poison in the food she gave Sells for supper. She did so and Sells died the next day.

Confronted with arrest, Baehr put the whole blame on his child wife and she was accused of the crime and put in jail. When her trial was called her husband advised her to plead guilty, telling her that if she did so she would escape with a light sentence in jail.

The girl did as she was told. Instead of giving her a light jail sentence, the judge sentenced her to state's prison for life. Even then she did not realize how great her punishment was to be, and on the day that she was taken to prison she told her friends she would be back in seven months.

Forgotten in Prison.

Soon after she entered the state penitentiary her husband committed suicide, driven to it, it is claimed, by remorse for his act in compelling his wife to poison Sells. After Baehr's death the case of the girl wife in the state penitentiary was forgotten and she was left without friends.

Two weeks ago several wealthy and influential citizens of Oconto county interested themselves in her behalf and a petition for her pardon reciting the facts in the case was laid before Governor Davidson. He investigated for himself and became convinced that justice had been satisfied.

Facts in Her Favor.

While it was proven that Wilhelmina actually put poison in the food of a guest, the fact that her husband commanded her to commit the crime, that she was almost a child, ignorant, and afraid of her husband, weighed in her favor. It is believed she would never have been convicted, or at least would never have received so severe a sentence, had all the facts been brought out in a trial. Her plea of guilty, however, made the trial only a formality.

Mrs. Baehr will return to Shawano county, where those of her people who are still alive reside, and begin anew a life so sadly interrupted. She was a model prisoner, and learned to speak, read and write English during the sixteen years she was in prison.

Day's Happenings in the Industrial World

WEEK-END EXCURSION.

Nearly 2,000 Fort Wayne People Go to Chicago.

A conservative estimate of the number of Fort Wayne people who will be in Chicago tomorrow is placed at between 1,700 and 1,800. Thirteen hundred and forty-five are now there or on the way and there are four trains for which tickets will be sold to be heard from. Of the number sold up to the noon hour, the Pennsylvania disposed of 865 and the Nickel Plate 480. The agents of each road expect to sell at least 200 more tickets and if their expectations are realized, it will bring the sales for this city up to the 1,800 point. Word from along the line is to the effect that the people of the towns and villages are turning out better than expected and that the grand total of the business will exceed 3,200. The early morning trains appear to be the favorite. No. 25, on the Pennsylvania, carried 361 Fort Wayne people, and No. 5, on the Nickel Plate, carried 180 people out of this city. A good feature of the business is the heavy eastbound movement out of Chicago on account of the G. A. R. encampment at Saratoga, which gives the railway an opportunity to use the cars and power, which under different circumstances, would remain idle until the week-end excursionists are ready to return.

E. T. DAVIS VERY SICK.

Former Fort Wayne Railroad Man in Dangerous Way.

A message from Indianapolis this morning brought news to E. Gregg Davis of the very serious condition of his father, Edward T. Davis, who resides in that city. The message stated that the patient was not expected to survive the attack. Mr. Davis is foreman of the Pennsylvania freight house in Indianapolis. He held a similar position in this city with the company a number of years, but when Fred Sawyer became freight agent at Indianapolis for the Pennsylvania, about eight years ago, he induced Mr. Davis to go there also and assume charge of the warehouse. Gregg Davis was in the country negotiating a real estate deal when the message concerning his father came and it was several hours before he could be located. He left at noon for Indianapolis.

WILL RETURN TO OLD HOME.

A. Lisska, for three or four years employed at the Pennsylvania round house, when he was not sick, resigned yesterday and will leave in a day or two for Poland to join his wife and daughter and reside permanently. He has not seen either member of his family since he left them four years ago to make a home for them in America. But sickness blasted his hopes in that line and he is now going to return to Poland. Last night a number of Lisska's fellow countrymen gave him a farewell reception. He has been unable to work for a month.

TURNED OUT TWELVE ENGINES.

Twelve engines constituted the weekly output from the Pennsylvania shops the past week, each receiving general repairs. They were Nos. 7057, 7106, 7146, 7169, 7196, 7225, 7374, 7411, 7630, 7716, 7824 and 8151.

SOLDIERS GOING WEST.

Thirty-six recruits for the Seventh United States cavalry now stationed at Fort Reiley, Kan., passed through the city last night, occupying two tourist cars. The soldiers were recruited in the vicinity of Fort Slocum, N. Y., and they were a nice, orderly party. They came over the Nickel Plate to New Haven, where they were delivered to the Wabash. Capt. J. A. Starbird had charge of the party.

THE PETOSKEY EXCURSION.

Trains Carried Over 560 People Out of Fort Wayne.

The second excursion to Petoskey and other northern points of the season over the G. R. & I. was all that was expected of it in a numerical way. There were two trains, the first carrying 260 and the second about 300 people out of Fort Wayne. There were sixty-seven tickets sold here.

JOE SULLIVAN SICK.

Advices from the bedside of J. A. Sullivan is to the effect that he is getting along nicely and will not have a very severe attack. Mr. Sullivan suffers from typhoid fever and is now confined to his home in Detroit. For a number of years he was the Wabash freight agent at this point, being transferred to the more important agency at Detroit last winter.

'PHONES INSTEAD OF CALLERS.

At Pittsburg the Pennsylvania has adopted the rule of calling yard and train crews by telephone instead of the old method of messenger and the Pittsburg Post says the method is giving satisfaction. The telephones that were placed in the homes of trainmen who were not already supplied, have proven successful and the Post says the system will be extended.

PAID OUT $20,000.

As a wage distributing medium the Fort Wayne Rolling Mills company is quite a factor in Fort Wayne and is rapidly growing in importance in that line. Today was the semi-monthly distribution of wages at that establishment, the amount distributed falling just a few dollars below the $20,000 mark. The mills are very busy and are working a big force.

END RULE OF RICH, SAYS TAFT.

Country Tired of the Plethora of Millionaires and Their Influences.

Portland, Ore., Sept. 7.—Speaking at a luncheon at which he was the guest of honor yesterday, Secretary Taft said that he was firmly convinced that the time had come when the country was tired of the plethora of millionaires and of their influences, and it had been demonstrated and could further be shown that the business of the nation should be run on the principle of a square deal to every one and special privileges to none, be he rich or poor. That, he said, had been the principle of the present administration, and it would be with the republican administration to come.

He expressed confidence in the ability of the people to rise up and regulate whatever abuses might exist, and said the people had done this before and would do it again if occasion offered.

"The government and the people are in control," he said. "They are deaf to the criticism and machinations of powerful and arrogant combinations of capital, and they are equally deaf to the threats that are so freely uttered by powerful demagogues."

WANT ROOSEVELT THIRD TERM.

Popular Will Seen by Secretary Straus During a Trip.

Chicago, Sept. 7.—"The sentiment I found in every section of the country visited expressed an enthusiastic wish and determined desire for the re-election of President Roosevelt," said Secretary Oscar S. Straus, of the department of commerce and labor, yesterday.

Mr. Straus was in Chicago on his way to Oyster Bay, where he will report to President Roosevelt the result of his trip through the Hawaiian Islands, Canada and states along the Pacific coast.

"When I stated to the people what almost everybody knows of the position the president has taken they seemed to hope that conditions would compel him to accept the nomination," continued Secretary Straus. "The only other name I heard in connection with the presidency was that of Secretary Taft."

ONE IN THREE.

Every Third Person Poisoned by Coffee.

It is difficult to make people believe that coffee is an absolute poison to at least one person out of every three, but people are slowly finding it out, although thousands of them suffer terribly before they discover the fact.

A New York hotel man says: "Each time after drinking coffee I became restless, nervous and excited, so that I was unable to sit five minutes in one place, was also inclined to vomit and suffered from loss of sleep, which got worse and worse.

"A lady said that perhaps coffee was the cause of my trouble, and suggested that I try Postum Food Coffee. I laughed at the thought that coffee hurt me, but she insisted so hard that I finally had some Postum made. I have been using it in place of coffee ever since, for I noticed that all my former nervousness and irritation disappeared. I began to sleep perfectly, and the Postum tasted as good or better than the old coffee, so what was the use of sticking to a beverage that was ruining me?

"One day on an excursion up the country I remarked to a young lady friend on her greatly improved appearance. She explained that some time before she had quit using coffee and taken Postum. She had gained a number of pounds and her former palpitation of the heart, humming in the ears, trembling of the hands and legs and other disagreeable feelings had disappeared. She recommended me to quit coffee and take Postum and was very much surprised to find that I had already made the change.

"She said her brother had also received great benefit from leaving off coffee and taking on Postum Food Coffee." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

WOMEN TO COMPOSE BOARD.

Innovation on Stewards' Body of United Brethren Church.

The board of stewards of the United Brethern church has been increased in number from five to eleven and the personnel changed to strictly women. This decision was made by the executive board Friday evening at their meeting and the stewards were chosen as follows: Mrs. A. A. Bowser, Mrs. C. M. Menefee, Mrs. Theodore Titus, Mrs. Lucinda Rayl, Mrs. C. H. Piatt, Mrs. Charles Roberts, Mrs Ella Stridler, Mrs. Bertha Lucas, Mrs. Phillip Titus, Mrs. Ida Smith and Miss Inez Meison.

The report of the board was very gratifying and showed that with the exception of a few dollars the entire expenses of the year had been met and when Rev. G. F. Byrer goes to the conference next Tuesday he will be able to make a satisfactory report.

The conference is to be held at Fulton, Ind., and is called the St. Joseph conference of the church. Bishop T. M. Mathews, of Chicago, will preside. The conference has a congregational membership of over 15,000 including all cities of the state from Wabash and Lafayette north.

LARGE DONATION TO ORPHANS.

Staats Verbund Settles Up Accounts and Aids Charity.

After settling up all accounts and obligations incident to the holding of the recent convention of the Staats Verbund, the organization of the German Catholic societies of the state, which occurred in this city in May, the executive committee has found there is a nice balance on hand and at a recent meeting they voted to give the bulk of it to charity.

Hence the St. Vincents' Orphan asylum was given the largest part of it and smaller sums were given to the St. Charles Benevolent society of the St. Mary's Catholic church and a like sum to the St. Martinus' Benevolent society of the St. Peters' Catholic church. The members of the committee are greatly elated over the fine showing which the convention made in this city and the business like manner in which it was carried on.

JEWISH NEW YEAR.

Fort Wayne Hebrews Will Celebrate Advent of Year 5668.

The Jewish New Year, beginning the year of 5668, will be celebrated Sunday and Monday by the orthodox Jews and Monday by the reformed Jews. The real New Year's day begins Sunday at sunset and continues until Monday at sunset. The occasion of the two different celebrations is caused by the fact that in the olden days when there was less accuracy, the New Year's day was announced by the kindling of fires on the hilltops. Some times rain would interfere with this and thus two days had to be celebrated to be sure to get the right one. The orthodox Jews continue that custom until this day. Services were held in the Jewish synagogues as usual today and they will continue till Monday evening.

SALOON CASES POSTPONED.

Terre Haute, Ind., Aug. 7.—Further action looking to the revocation of the saloon licenses of Robert Hall, Fred Ellenberger and other saloon men arrested for liquor law violations was postponed yesterday until Monday. A strong fight is being put up by the saloon men, who have appealed all cases to the supreme court. Judge Piety is withholding his decision in the circuit court regarding the constitutionality of the blind tiger law.

INDIANA STATE FAIR BEGINS ON NEXT MONDAY

Greatest Show Ever Given and Double Amount in Premiums.

Indianapolis, Sept. 7.—What is regarded as the most important state fair that has been held in Indiana since the exposition was organized fifty-four years ago, will open Monday to continue its programs and features through the following Friday. The week rally marks a new era for the fair in a number of ways. Monday morning Governor Hanly will dedicate the new live-stock show pavilion. The building represents the first investment in the way of permanent improvements that the legislature of Indiana has ever made on the fair grounds.

The coming fair will also have the largest offerings in purses and prizes that have been given, amounting to $60,000. A large portion of this sum comes from national and state live stock associations, which have offered prizes to promote the interests of special classes of horses and cattle. The purses in the speed classes amount to $24,000, or twice the sum of any other year.

Throughout the fair the premiums are richer than heretofore. The prizes for horses and cattle reach almost $30,000, about double the amount of last year. The prize money on these two classes of live stock, together with the new pavilion, has caused the entry lists for the arena shows to be very heavy.

TO FIGHT PLAGUE WITH FIRE.

San Francisco Board of Health Orders Hospitals Burned.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 7.—The board of health yesterday recommended to the board of supervisors that the city and county hospital, which has sheltered a number of plague cases, be burned. The supervisors called a meeting for last night to decide as to what action shall be taken. The city and county hospital is a collection of frame buildings and it has long been planned to demolish it.

The announcement that the marine hospital service is to take charge of the plague situation is regarded here as an assurance that the progress of the disease will be stopped in short order. Dr. Ruppert Blue, who has been assigned by Surgeon General Wyman to direct the campaign, had charge during the former appearance of the plague and has the confidence of the entire community.

REMEMBERS HIS STEPMOTHER.

Blackford County Man Leaves Entire Estate to Aged Woman.

Hartford City, Ind., Sept. 7.—An unusual affection for a stepmother is shown in the will of the late Michael Kirby, filed here yesterday for probate, and in which the deceased makes her absolute benefactress and cuts off his two brothers and a sister without a cent.

The estate is valued at several thousand, of which $1,200 is in bank certificates. The will states that because of the fact that his brothers and sister showed no concern regarding his welfare or his rights that it is the wish of the maker that they take nothing from his estate.

The last words of Michael Kirby before he passed away were regarding his stepmother. "The only reason I hate to die," he said, "is because of my poor old stepmother."

POISONED CANDY SENT IN MAIL.

Racine People Made Ill and Woman, Accused of Crime, is Arrested.

Racine, Wis., Sept. 7.—Accused of having sent poisoned candy through the mails to a number of Racine people, Miss Adelaide Korizk, a member of a prominent family of this city, was arrested yesterday. A number of persons, among them a Mrs. Kent and her daughter, and Mrs. Morgan have been poisoned by boxes of candy sent to them as samples. Mrs. Morgan reported the matter to Mayor Horlick, who is a chemist. The mayor analyzed the candy sent to her and found arsenic in it. He turned over the matter to Chief of Police Baker, who arrested Miss Korizk. The accused woman was pronounced insane by physicians, and will be sent to an asylum.

EXPLORERS ARE SAFE.

London, Sept. 7.—5:30 p. m.—The Evening News announces that a cable dispatch was received in London today from Gilben, Alaska, saying that Capt. Mikkelsen, on the Arctic steamer Duchess of Bedford, and his companions are safe, having traversed the ice to a place of safety after the wreck of the ship.

CONSPIRE TO RUIN THE CAREER OF A WEST POINT CADET

"Silent Treatment" for a Youth Because He Would Not Tell a Lie.

New York, Sept. 7.—Although the situation created at West Point by the "silent treatment" of Cadet Bock, accused by his classmates with having reported Cadet Corporal Sherman for hazing him, has become serious, Col. R. L. Howze, the commandant, yesterday denied that he would recommend the dismissal of the whole plebe class which is giving the "silent treatment" to Cadet Bock.

Col. Howze said that this would be impossible, for the punishment of Bock is being done in a way that leaves no room for complaint under the regulations.

The commandant admitted that he had appealed to seniors and cadet captains to assist him in averting the utter ruin of Cadet Bock's career.

Cruelty of "Silent Treatment."

"Silent treatment" at West Point consists in treating the cadet who has been sentenced to it as if he did not exist. His own classmates refuse to speak to him under any pretext and cadets in the other classes follow their example. The cadet under "silent treatment" lives in a state of complete isolation.

It is the punishment meted out by the cadets to a classmate suspected of "squealing," and it is calculated to drive the cadet from West Point in disgrace.

Both Cadet Bock and Cadet Sherman are "yearlings." The trouble started some time ago when Sherman treated Bock to a mild form of hazing. The hazing came to the notice of the commanding officers and Sherman was sentenced to extra guard punishment. Bock was instantly accused by his classmates of having squealed and was immediately ostracized.

Commandant Howze Worried.

"There is only one solution of the situation that I can figure out," said Col. Howze, "and that is by enlisting the aid of cadet captains and the seniors. They will soon be regular army officers with their commissions and I can talk with them as officers without relaxing the discipline of the academy. I do not know how successful it will be, but we are going to try our best. The 'cutting' will pursue Cadet Bock all his life and he may not be able to stand it and will consequently have to leave the academy.

"Bock was not a voluntary tale bearer. The circumstances were these: He was reported for not going through his exercises to the satisfaction of his drillmaster, and when I asked him why he did not do as instructed he said that he could not because he was nervous. Then I asked him point plank what had made him nervous and he was compelled to tell of the hazing given him by Sherman.

Says Cadet Did Not "Squeal."

"If the young man had lied to protect Sherman he would not have been tolerated in the academy. On the other hand, he offended by putting himself in a position where the hazing came out. He could not have acted otherwise than he did. As far as I have been able to judge in this short time Bock seems to have the right sort of matter in him. He looks like a capable, clean young man."

Cadet Bock has had two weeks of the silent treatment. Not a word is spoken to him save in orders that are required by the regulations. He might as well be in solitary confinement. The young man's father is a wealthy physician in Missouri and the boy is said to come of fine stock.

The next meeting of the Sunday school teachers' training class will be held at the Wayne street M. E. church Monday evening at 7:45 o'clock.

Citizens of Lakeside will hold another public meeting Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock in the barn on the premises of P. J. Archer to take further action regarding the improvement of the Maumee river front along the Lakeside district.

Simple Ways of Removing Fruit and Vegetable Stains

By Elizabeth Lee.

Summer stains, as they may be termed, though not so deeply set as those formed in winter, are often difficult to remove. The spots made by grass, fruit, etc., if cleansed while fresh are more easily taken out than when allowed to remain on the material for several days. As for the smaller soils one picks up in other seasons, they are not so apt to reveal themselves prominently and consequently are usually overlooked until perhaps quite deeply rooted. Grass stains are extremely obstinate and the best advice I can give is to beware of them. However, once contracted, supposing one is some distance from the house, the better plan is to rub the spot between the hands, using the same process as if washing. A little of the green will generally disappear. Upon arriving home wet the spot with cold water, then soap well, allowing suds to remain on fabric for fifteen minutes. Wring and lay in boiling water, to which washing soda has been added. Keep lifting up and down until no stain remains, or, if it is still obstinate scrub with a nail brush.

Of course, only white materials may be treated in this way, the delicate materials in dainty colorings will not stand the soda. At the same time the grass stain will show less in colors than on white and if the material is quite thin, then careful washing in warm water, borax and ivory soap will remedy matters, if not in the first wash, why then it will surely respond to the second or third laundering. If the color has been lost during this process of removing the stain, it may be revived by rinsing in water to which a few drops of ammonia has been added.

Supposing the spots on the white goods refuse to disappear, then javelle water must be used. Such materials as duck and drill will often hold the stain so closely, owing to their thickness, that nothing but chloride of lime will remove them.

Fruit stains are classed with the vegetable substances, tea, coffee and wine being included also.

Such spots call for treatment by alkalies, as common salt, borax, soda and chloride of lime. The best, because the handiest, thing to do is to heap salt upon the freshly made stain, rubbing a little while, water for washing it is being heated. Then rinse the borax and hot water (or soda, if the stained article is white), and the spot will immediately disappear.

Fruit stains on table linen may be removed by holding the soiled part tightly over a bowl, while the second person covers the spot with salt, then pours boiling water through the cloth. This is a very safe remedy, but the stain must be so treated quickly, while it is still fresh.

One is apt to contract ink stains in the summer time, when people live more or less out of doors. If attended to at once their removal is not difficult. Being a mineral stain, an acid should be the remedy sought. Keep washing in the closest watch until all traces of the stain have disappeared.

Any spots that turn to rust in the wash should be thoroughly saturated with salt and lemon juice then left in the sun to dry. Many times this application will be necessary. Salt and lemon juice will also effectively remove spots of fruit or vegetables from the hands. If obstinate partly dry the hands and then hold them over a lighted match, moving to allow the flame to almost reach each stain. Vaseline stains will generally respond to a bath of kerosene. Ether is better, perhaps, but not always so available as kerosene. If ether is used then after wetting the satin, a cup should be placed over it to prevent evaporation.

Mud spots come under the head of summer stains. If the soiled garment is white or of washable material they can, of course, be removed by laundering. Black or dark cloth, however, may be freshened by being rubbed with a raw potato cut in halves (another remedy that is sure to be at hand), first, however, removing as much of the mud as possible with a brush, the potato is to remove the stain left by the mud, and not the mud itself. Machine oil marks on dainty white or colored goods should be dipped in benzine.

French chalk should be included when packing the trunk for going away. It is excellent for laying on ordinary stains and soils picked up by cloth of silk, and is perfectly safe to use on any fabric whatever. It should entirely cover the stains, and after being allowed to stay on over night must be brushed off in the morning.

Dust collected around the bottom of skirts and petticoats should not be brushed, but a soft dust rag should be used, going into the ruffles or ruching, as the case may be.

MEN PAST SIXTY IN DANGER.

More than half of mankind over sixty years of age suffer from kidney and bladder disorders, usually enlargement of the prostate gland. This is both painful and dangerous, and Foley's Kidney Cure should be taken at the first sign of danger, as it corrects irregularities and has cured many old men of this disease. Mr. Rodney Burnett, Rock Port, Mo., writes: "I suffered with enlarged prostate gland and kidney trouble for years and after taking two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure I feel better than I have for twenty years, although I am now 91 years old." Dreier & Bro.

THE WOMAN EVERY ONE LIKES.

The woman whom every one likes is an excellent talker and listener, but she listens more than she talks. She never gossips, but she is kind and liberal in her judgments. She has a faculty of remembering likes and dislikes and never treads on other people's corns, and she never asks unnecessary or curious questions.—Home Chat.

Dr. Finn's Testimony Interesting.

Dr. Thomas Finn, of Boonsboro, Mo., who has practiced medicine for 22 years, says he has used every prescription known to the profession for treatment of kidney and bladder diseases, and says he has never found anything so effective in both chronic and acute kidney and bladder trouble as Foley's Kidney Cure. It stops irregularities and builds up the whole system. Dreier

SMART TAILOR AUTUMN COSTUMES.

Two distinct styles of waist coats are shown in a couple of tailor suits adapted not only for autumn, but for winter. Scarcely any costume will be seen this season without a contrasting underjacket that adds to the coat's warmth as well as serving as trimming.

Rolling collars and cuffs of black velvet are combined with any color, and the newest show no stitching whatever.

Cutaway will be one of the favorite models of the year, and skirts, though longer than those worn through the summer will clear the ground.

Is There Satisfaction in Having the Last Word?

"Answering Back" and "Having the Last Word" Often Results in Broken Friendship.

By Edith Carruth.

Did you ever stop to think whether there was any real satisfaction in "answering back?" We all do it at times, I know, but a mulish persistence in having the "last word" never helped to heal any breach of friendship nor cut short a quarrel. To the contrary, we simply increase the irritation of the moment, and prolong a situation that should not be allowed to continue.

Of course, in the end, one person or the other does get the last word, but in a real out and out quarrel, which, by the way, is about one of the silliest things two people can indulge in, there is rarely satisfaction in this achievement. If by it our adversary has been convinced or seen the error of her ways, one would positively wish for feathers to preen in joy. Instead of this, however, we know that our last word has merely been another demonstration of our disagreeableness, and but added to the obstinacy of the other. There is taken away that healing possibility of any quarrel, "agreeing to disagree," which might have been allowed if each had not hung on with bulldog pertinacity for the last word and answered back till each is at a point of ceasing to speak at all.

One of the delights of well trained minds is to argue, and between such arguments and the disagreements of young people there is a very wide difference. The latter, being impulsive and enthusiastic, each at the same time convinced that she is right, speedily proceed to enunciate opinions as facts, and a friendly difference becomes a quarrel if it is not soon checked.

It is by no means necessary to agree always with each and all one's friends, but it is most important when disagreeing to keep one's temper well in hand, and to remember that, after all, it is a most trifling matter whether or not the other is brought around to one's opinion.

To convince another is for some occult reason most difficult, possibly because human nature being frail, hates to admit itself in the wrong. But it is by no means necessary that the other should be convinced if she does not wish to be. It is enough that one is right without figuratively batting the other over the head to make her admit it. Drop the matter if after a few minutes your theories or opinions have produced no results. It is even worth while sometimes to pretend to agree, for, after all, isn't it better to give up this way and have general friendliness than aggressively to stick to something that is of itself most trivial?

A most philosophical young woman was telling me not long ago that she had quite given over trying to change the opinions of her friends about anything, even when it was a matter that could be demonstrated with paper and pencil. "It is enough for me to know that I am right," she concluded. "It doesn't trouble me in the least that they persist in being wrong, so I just drop the matter, and no feelings are hurt."

There is a good deal of wisdom in this conclusion, and that it works well I know, for the girl is popular with everyone. All will tell you that she has positive opinions, but that she doesn't try to force them down the throats of others, so you see the girl cannot be accused of deceitfulness when she doesn't enter into violent arguments.

One must stand up for a principle, and hold fast to what one knows is right when it concerns the real matters of life, but most of the things that people quarrel about are not worth thinking of a second time, and the difference is increased and aggravated by an obstinate, if unconscious desire to have the last word. Adopt the philosophy of the wise girl, and let it be enough for you to know that you are right, letting the other wander in outer darkness of error if she prefers.

New Fall Afternoon Model.

This stunning costume for early fall wear is one that will be admired and much worn by young women who need suits that are appropriate for street use and for afternoon receptions. The skirt is plaited and made on long graceful lines, while the short, semi-fitting jacket of pompadour silk, trimmed with velvet and lace, is serviceable worn either with cloth or silk skirts

How Daisy Chains of Beads are Made at Home

Explicit Directions for Threading Beads Together in Form of Daisies—Background Work Explained.

BY ELIZABETH LEE.

I can give you the instructions you desire, though I am a little doubtful about this being of practical use, unless you are unusually clever at "picking out patterns." Once one has seen the bead work done, if only half an inch or so of the necklet is shown, then, I think, the instructions will take you through to the end. These are for the necklets made with the needle and thread, not by loom. For a daisy chain, the ground work is of a color, the daisies white with a yellow centre. The background may be of any preferred color, some are green, others pale blue, and again, black is often seen. To start the chain, one bead the color to be used for the background, which we will say is blue, is put on the needle, then tied securely to the end of the thread. Put the needle through the tied bead. Take up the second blue one, pass it on to the thread and then put the needle through the first bead used. Take up a third blue bead in the same manner, passing the needle afterward through the second bead, then the fourth blue bead is put through the third bead. Now pass the needle through the second bead. These four beads start the background and if rightly made will resemble a diamond.

The daisy is made next. Take up one white bead. Pass to the thread and then take the needle through the fourth blue bead of the background.

A blue bead comes next, and when this is on the thread pass the needle through the blue bead nearest it. Now another blue bead, afterward passing the needle through the blue bead put on before this one; next a white bead, then pass the needle through the white bead put on before. Two white beads and one yellow, in the order described, come next; then the needle is passed through the second white bead in place. A single blue bead is now put on the needle, the needle then is passed through the blue bead which stands out from the others.

Next a blue bead, passing the needle through the blue bead put on just before. Two white beads come next; then the thread is passed through the yellow bead. Another white bead is added and the needle is taken through the two white beads that were put on before the needle was put through the yellow bead. To complete the daisy the thread is passed through all the white beads forming it, the needle taking a direction toward you. A backward movement will not answer. One daisy and a little bit of background is now complete, but as the flowers form an edge to the background and do not run in a row it is quite as necessary to know how to make the second daisy as it was to understand the formation of the first.

More background is the next process. This differs a little from the starting. To do it take a blue bead on the needle, then pass the thread through the blue bead next it. Now we are ready for the second daisy, which is to be formed on the opposite edge but diagonally from the daisy in place.

Commence by putting a white bead on the needle, then pass the thread through the blue bead last put on. Take a blue bead on the needle next and pass the thread through the second white bead of the daisy that has already been formed. A blue bead comes next, then the needle is passed through the blue bead put on before the thread was passed through the white bead last mentioned. Now a white bead, passing the thread through the white bead that commenced the second daisy. Two white beads and a yellow one come next in the order named, then the thread is passed through the white bead that was put on the needle before the three—two whites and one yellow—were taken up.

A blue bead comes next, passing the thread through the blue that will be seen to stand out from the others. Put another blue bead on the needle and pass through the blue bead put on previously. Now two white beads are taken up by the needle, the thread then passing through the yellow bead.

A white one comes next, and the thread should then be passed through those two white beads that were taken up by the needle at the same time. Now pass the thread through all the white beads, according to the instructions given for the first daisy, and the second is then quite complete.

To proceed with the background follow those directions coming directly after the first daisy was finished.

Both daisies and background are formed as you go along. Supposing you fail to find some one who can give you an ocular demonstration of the process, then the next best thing will be to get some one to hold the printed instructions, reading off each detail as you use the needle and thread. You will find this system of working is far less difficult than reading and sewing at the same time.

Bread and Cake Kept in Clean Boxes Will Not Mould

Jars and Boxes Washed Thoroughly in Borax or Strong Soda Water and Dried in Sun Will Prevent Rolls, Etc., from Moulding.

By Helen Howe.

A little watchfulness of the kitchen and larder in warm weather will usually keep down household bills, for it is not expected that even the best of servants will look after the preservation of cooked and raw foods as carefully as will their mistresses. The slightest thing tainted in the refrigerator will generally affect another, and the same is true of cooked food. Many things spoil by souring, and chief among them is bread. Much of what comes from the baker's or is made at home is thrown out in warm weather because of mildew.

Half the trouble in keeping rolls, etc., in eatable condition would be eliminated if the bread box were kept clean, for unless the cleansing which it should have every week is a thorough one, bits are left in from time to time and the whole box soon becomes tainted.

While a stone jar is a good receptacle for both bread and cake in winter, I do not think it is in warm weather, because it gathers moisture more quickly than tin, and mildew is therefore more liable. The best box is tin, with a good fitting cover, and to be quite perfect in keeping the bread and holding down bills this receptacle should have a lining of crash toweling so arranged that on all four sides the edges hang over the outside. As a matter of fact, the lining is merely two strips of crash, each the width of the way it goes.

This takes up superfluous dampness and effectually prevents moisture. It should be changed at least once a week and a new set put in.

Once a week this box should have a washing with strong soda or borax water and be put into the sun to air, lid up. Only in this way can one be sure that the inside will not accumulate a close odor that the bread will rapidly take on. If tiny red ants make their appearance at any time wash the box well, then rinse with a strong solution of chloride of lime, taking care that none gets on the paint outside. Rinse again in clear hot water and put, open, into the sun to dry and air.

Cake should never be kept in the same box with bread, for the latter seems to absorb the sweetness of this pastry, leaving it tasteless. The cake box requires the same care as that for rolls, etc., and much trouble will be saved if one is particular about not putting away cake before it is cold. If at all warm it will steam in the box and hasten mildew.

To put cake on a cloth as soon as it comes from the oven is a mistake, for the heat does not then pass off, but is driven into the loaf. There are racks for drying it, but quite as good as one is the old fashioned sieves with wooden rings. This should be placed on the table upside down and a fresh towel laid over it. On this put the hot loaf, and the steam will pass out through the fine wire beneath.

I do not believe in stone jars for keeping cake, for the reason that if it is to be eaten soon it will not need the dampness had from stone, and if kept a long time in stone it will become soggy. The exception to this is fruit cake; that is much improved by being put for some weeks into a crock, but must be watched to see that it does not mildew.

Saved Her Son's Life.

The happiest mother in the little town of Ava, Mo., is Mrs. S. Ruppee. She writes: "One year ago my son was down with such serious lung trouble that our physician was unable to help him; when, by our druggist's advice I began giving him Dr. King's New Discovery, and I soon noticed improvement. I kept this treatment up for a few weeks when he was perfectly well. He has worked steadily since at carpenter work. Dr. King's New Discovery saved his life." Guaranteed best cough and cold cure by Dreier & Bro., druggists, 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

A THOUGHT.

There is trouble enough in the world. Try to banish some of it away with a smile and a laugh and a kind word. You owe a duty to yourself and to your fellow beings to be happy.—Home Chat.

How to Remain Young.

To continue young in health and strength, do as Mrs. N. F. Rowan, McDonough, Ga., did. She says: "Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured me of chronic liver and stomach trouble, complicated with such an unhealthy condition of the blood that my skin turned red as flannel. I am now practically 20 years younger than before I took Electric Bitters. I can now do all my work with ease and assist in my husband's store." Guaranteed at Dreier & Bro.'s drug store. Price 50c.

DIET AND BEAUTY.

Women who want to be beautiful must pay attention to their diet. Buckets of lotions, pounds of creams and skin foods, boxes of flesh brushes, complexion rollers, soaps—nothing, not one of these, can produce the slightest effect in helping to give the right color and glow to the complexion that has been spoiled by improper food, says Woman's Life.

When pimples make their appearance on girl's faces many a mother will even run to give blood tonics and such, while still allowing their daughters to devour fresh pork chops, veal cutlets, but never a bit of fruit or fresh greens, "because they don't like anything of that kind, but prefer good, substantial, hearty food."

The New Pure Food and Drug Law.

We are pleased to announce that Foley's Honey and Tar for coughs, colds and lung troubles is not affected by the National Pure Food and Drug law as it contains no opiates or other harmful drugs, and we recommend it as a safe remedy for children and adults. Dreier & Bro.

The value of settlers' effects taken into Canada by American immigrants in 1906 fiscal year was $1,153,933, against only $11,223 by British immigrants, and only $6,244 by all other immigrants.

A Clear Complexion and Bright Eyes.

In most cases a sallow, blotched complexion and dull heavy eyes are due to poor digestion and an inactive liver. Orino Laxative Fruit Syrup aids digestion and stimulates the liver and bowels and makes the complexion smooth and clear. Orino Laxative Fruit Syrup does not nauseate or gripe and is mild and pleasant to take. Refuse substitutes. Dreier & Bro.

GIANTS JUST MISSED MAKING SOME HISTORY

MATHEWSON.

Baseball people at the Polo Ground in New York were almost on the point of making history Thursday afternoon. If Mathewson hadn't thrown the ball over Bresnahan's head in the first inning of the second game it is just possible that the Gianis would have put up a record for 1907 rather a curiosity in its way, for had it not been for that wild pitch the Brooklyns would not have made a run against the New York team in twenty-nine consecutive innings. That seems to be going some. However, Mathewson made the wild pitch, and the record is one of those little affairs which would have looked lovely hanging over the parlor mantel, but it will never be hung—not this year, at least.

BEACH PARKS AFTER A VICTORY OVER THE SHAMROCK

May Try Out Left Hander to Puzzle Cleary's Ball Tossers.

Mart Cleary and his aggregation will go against the Cleveland Beach Parks tomorrow afternoon at League Park, starting the scrap promptly at 2:45 o'clock, and the announcement that Manager Cahill and his crowd will be over means good base ball as the Forest City combination has never failed to put up clean, fast battles in its visits to Fort Wayne.

The last time the team came over Cahill had a surprise all bottled up for the locals but the surprise missed the train. This time he will be supplied with an alarm clock and if it goes off on time Mr. Jahenke, left hander, will be uncorked for the benefit of the waiting multitude. Jahenke has been delivering the goods over in Ohio and is looked upon as a tough proposition by the best independent and salaried teams outside of the big leagues. With the exception of Kimmerling, who was with Evansville this spring and who finished with Anderson when it went to the bad, on first base, the team will line up practically the same as when here.

Erickson will be back in the sunfield and Cherry will return to first and the men will play in the positions in which they won eighteen games and lost seven. Chairs have been provided for the grand stand in event of an overflow crowd and as the Clevelands are favorites here a good, big attendance is looked for. The teams will be made up as follows:

Clevelands.	Positions.	Shamrocks.
Fowler	SHORT	Gage
Kimmerling	FIRST	Cherry
O'Brien	SECOND	Smith
Henderson	THIRD	Beach
Ohlrich	CENTER	Koons
Blanchard	RIGHT	Erickson

GAMES IN AMERICAN ASSOCIATION.

Champions Drop Two Games to the Indians.

Indianapolis, Sept. 7.—Indianapolis took both games of a double-header from Columbus. The locals won the first contest in the third inning, when they batted Hall out of the box. The second was called in the seventh inning and went to the home club through timely hitting by Carr and Hopke. Carr knocked a home run in the fifth inning, bringing in two men ahead of him. A large amount of silver money was thrown at Carr by the excited spectators when he had completed the circuit. Score of the first game:

NEWCASTLE GETS POLO RINK.

Town Will Be In Shape to Have Team If Craze Hits Indiana Again.

Newcastle, Ind., Sept. 7.—Should the polo craze again capture Indiana cities the coming winter this city will be in a position to enjoy the sport for the first time. Heretofore there has been no building in the city or county suitable for the game, hence there are many people in the county who could not enjoy the sport without going to nearby cities. In the new coliseum being erected by A. H. Ward and Paul Jamison arrangements are being made looking to provisions for polo and pastime skating.

Additional ground adjoining the site secured for the coliseum has been secured by the two promoters and will enable them to erect a larger building. The site has been cleared and a force of men are now at work on the walls of the building. It is hoped to have it completed and ready for use by Thanksgiving day.

STOUT AT KOKOMO.

Old Cy Stout, six feet and a half tall and a reach of at least four feet, is playing first base with Kokomo, says the Bluffton Banner. Cy has been seen in Bluffton with other teams since the time of the earliest inhabitant, but is still able to clout the ball once in a while.

If It's Neuralgia

and those sharp, shooting, agonizing pains drive you almost crazy, take Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, and get relief. They drive out the pain by their soothing effect upon the nerves. When taken as directed they are harmless, and leave no bad after-effects. That's the reason they are so popular with all who use them. Your druggist can tell you what others in your locality think of them.

"I do positively think that Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are the best medicine ever put upon the market. I find them so restful and soothing, and without any bad after-effects. I have suffered with neuralgia so that my system would just ache and quiver, and I cannot take opiates; but I can take these tablets, and they always relieve me. No one that suffers with neuralgia need fear to take them as I know they will not form a habit, for if there was any opiate in them I could not take them. Just one in the morning when I feel bad, and I can do my work all day."
MRS. W. H. BURKETT, Macon, Ga.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first package will benefit. If it fails, he will return your money. 25 doses, 25 cents. Never sold in bulk.

MR. MARSHALL IS SILENT.

(Columbia City Post.)

The newspapers of the state are having a good deal to say about Hon. Thomas R. Marshall, of this city, in connection with his candidacy for the nomination for governor on the democratic ticket. The republican papers are talking about it fully as much as the democratic papers, but Mr. Marshall is not saying a word himself. Early in 1906 he expressed himself to the effect that he would like to become the governor of Indiana, but he did not say that he would become a candidate in 1908 or at any other time, nor has he said so yet. He is keeping quiet and is also keeping close track of conditions. Should he decide to enter the contest he will no doubt do so in ample time. It will be six or eight months before the convention is held.

Believing that there was little probability of a fire at their home, Mr. and Mrs. John Woggoman, of Warsaw, did not make the payment of the premium on their fire insurance policy when it became due a few days ago. Thursday afternoon at 4:45 o'clock their home was consumed by fire of unknown origin.

J. W. Pierce, editor and publisher of the Pierceton Record, was badly injured Wednesday. He was working at the engine when a valve blew out and his face was badly scalded, the full extent of the injuries not being fully known. He was conveyed to his home in a carriage and it is feared will be unable to resume work for several weeks.

Luke Vasaale, the Italian section hand, who was employed on the Nickel Plate section gang near South Whitley, has left for parts unknown. Lore was taken to a Fort Wayne hospital, where he is in a serious condition.

Forty members of company G, I. N. G., have spent three days at target practice on the range near Columbia City, which has been leased by the government for ten years, and some good scores were made. While camping on the range fire destroyed a tent occupied by John Shinneman, jr., and mate, and forty rounds of ammunition added to the gayety of the blaze. No man was injured.

M. B. Groves, of Milford, is the owner of a horse that had its hoofs partially eaten away by rats. The condition of the animal's feet is not due to any sickness. Instead, while lying down at night rodents began gnawing at its hoofs and it was only when the little animals began cutting through the bone into the flesh that the horse made any resistance. The tooth marks are still plain on the hoofs.

John Grace, who resides a mile south of Laud, is having a run of hard luck. A couple of weeks ago he was kicked by a horse and laid up a few days. William Geddes, jeweler, of Chicago, is a prisoner in the Elkhart county jail at Goshen for threatening to kill his wife, Harriet B. Geddes, who recently filed suit in the Elkhart superior court for divorce, alleging intemperate habits. Both principals are members of old families at Goshen, and well-to-do. Two years ago Mrs. Geddes built a home in Goshen, and a few weeks ago she separated from her husband and went to Goshen. Geddes threatened to kill her, and he came Thursday night. His wife was visiting her sister, Mrs. Harry Whalmer, and he went to the Whalmer home and attempted to force a window. This led to his arrest by the police.

Winona, one of the greatest religious centers in the country, with a population of from 1,000 to 10,000, changing with the coming of spring and fall, has never had a fire. The assembly was established in 1887, and since that time the park city, with its 350 houses and numerous larger buildings, has never had the semblance of a bad blaze. The place, however, is prepared for any emergency, having a volunteer fire department and a fire engine. Neither has been called into service in twelve years.

Insist on always getting the best flours, which is equivalent to saying, to be sure to call for Tresselt's "Silver Dollar" or "Hungarian Brand." Don't take the "just as good" excuse. These brands are well established and have a reputation based on their merits. They are a home product, made by

Two Fragile Boys to Own America's First Fortune of a Billion

Grandsons of Marshal Field, Chicago's Great Merchant, to Have That Sum if They Survive Until the Year 1945—Estate Growing by Leaps Yearly.

Upon the survival during a period of thirty-eight years of a pair of somewhat fragile lads hangs the ultimate disposition of a fortune which at that time is likely to amount to a round billion of dollars.

According to the best estimate that is the approximate sum which should be available in the year 1945 for division between Marshall and Henry Field, the grandsons of the late merchant prince of Chicago, whose name the elder bears. As the residuary legatees of the Marshall Field estate the major part of the merchant's huge fortune is to be held in trust for them until the elder of the two boys, who is now thirteen years old, shall have attained the age of fifty. Should both the lads live until then Marshall is to have three-fifths of the residuary estate and Henry, who is two years younger than his brother, will inherit the remaining two-fifths.

Already these two striplings are probably the wealthiest minor brothers in America. Should both live to realize the partition of the estate under the terms of their grandfather's will the share of each should be sufficient to rank him among the wealthiest men in the world. If, on the other hand, either Marshall or Henry should die without issue before the year 1945 the survivor of the two, to whom under the will the deceased brother's share reverts, might easily enough become that visionary, much discussed phenomenon—America's first billionaire.

Estimates of Wealth Vary.

When Marshall Field the elder died, a year ago last January, estimates of his fortune varied all the way from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000. When the executors filed their inventory in the probate court, in January, 1907, securities all being listed at their par value, the figures totalled about $80,000,000, and good financial authorities computed the actual value at the then market rates at about $93,000,000.

Mr. Field's 34,009 shares of the stock of the corporation of Marshall Field & Co., the par value of which is $3,400,000, for instance, are well known to be worth far more. Henry Clews in 1905 estimated the Field estate at $100,000,000, and it is argued that it must have increased since that time to $125,000,000. At the time of Mr. Field's marriage to his second wife, Mrs. Caton, in September, 1905, the Chicago Tribune estimated the Field wealth at $120,000,000.

An official of the Merchants' Loan and Trust company of Chicago, which institution is one of the trustees of the residuary estate, has recently estimated the estate at a round $100,000,000 at the time of the testator's death. Deducting from this the $25,000,000 devised by Mr. Field in specific bequests, the residue would amount to about $75,000,000, but this result is reached by computing securities at their par value and much of the real estate at considerably less than its present actual value. The same official considered an estimate of $15,000,000 as the annual income from the residuary estate much too high and thought from $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 probably nearer the mark.

Opposed to this estimate may be when the big income received from the $20,000,000 worth of Chicago real estate and the $8,000,000 real estate in New York City, the annual increment from which is known only to the trustees of the estate and they will not tell. It has been said that Marshall Field made $8,000,000 a year himself out of his dry goods business. This is a guess, but it is believed to be pretty close to the truth. With this income and the rental of real estate and other increments an impartial outsider might think the annual income of $15,000,000 none too high.

How Estate Will Grow.

Without allowing for appreciation in real estate values or values of stocks, bonds and other securities during the thirty-eight years' trust period, ignoring the fact that the immense downtown holdings of real estate in Chicago and New York are bound to grow tremendously in value and earning power in that period and conservatively estimating the estate at present at $75,000,000, allowing only an average rate of interest on all the property of six per cent., compounded semi-annually, the total at the end of thirty-eight years for a single dollar would be $9.4543 and for $75,000,000 would be $709,072,500. Young Marshall Field's three-fifths share of this would therefore amount to $425,443,500, and Henry Field's two-fifths share would be $283,629,000.

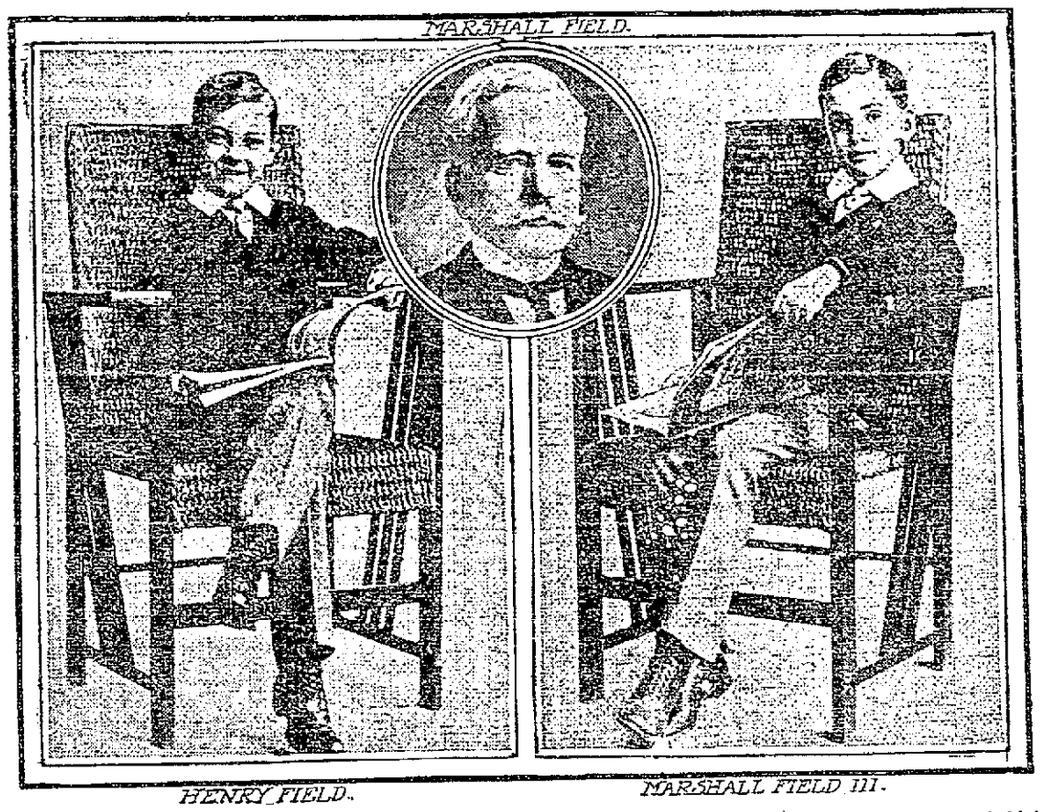
These figures do not allow for taxes, for possible losses or for administrative expenses, but with regard for the elder Marshall Field's generally accepted conservatism in investment the percentage in loss, with the aggregate of payments for taxes and administration, it is believed, would fall far short of offsetting the appreciation of the various holdings in real estate and securities.

If the present value of the estate be figured at any sum between the conservative $75,000,000 and $100,000,000 and multiplied by $9.4543, the sum which $1 will equal if allowed only to rest and gather six per cent. semi-annually compounded for the thirty-eight years of the trust period, the total residuary estate will become close to the billion mark.

Estimating it now at a round $100,000,000, and giving it only the benefit of an average of 6 per cent and without special regard for appreciation in the vast real estate holdings, the total residuary estate in 1945 would be $945,430,000. This is upon a 6 per cent basis, whereas it is practically certain that the annual income of the estate even now is $8,000,000, and it has been estimated as high as $15,000,000. It may and probably will go to treble that amount annually by the time the thirty-eight years have expired. Then, with principal adding to principal and interest piling on interest semi-annually, the wealth of the two Field boys not only will be far above the billion mark, but may be represented in figures more like $1,200,000,000.

Expenses Will Grow, Too.

Of course, as the estate grows, so will the expenses of caring for it and administering it, but these will be infinitesimal as compared with the vast growth of the residuary estate.



HENRY FIELD. MARSHALL FIELD III.

The trustees of this great residuary fund are Chauncey Keep, Arthur B. Jones, and the Merchants' Loan and Trust company. The trust is not in any event to be dissolved until the elder of the two boys, now thirteen years old, is over fifty years old.

Mr. Field, however, provided that the boys shall have gradually growing incomes, and specified, moreover, that when they reach the age of discretion they shall become associated with the trustees and executors, in order that their character may develop through work and responsibility. The will says this provision is made with a view to the true happiness of the boys themselves.

The residuary estate under the trusteeship mentioned will hold in its bulk the entire business of Marshall Field & Co., to be continued uninterrupted and without change in the policy developed through a generation by Mr. Field.

Young Marshall Field, who during the lifetime of his father and grandfather was known as Marshall Field 3d, is the oldest child of the late Marshall Field, Jr., who was the only son of Marshall Field the elder, and who died while yet a young man after having long been a physical weakling, suffering severely as a chronic invalid. Marshall Field, Jr., left three children, Marshall, Henry and a daughter, Gwendolyn, who is now five years old. To the veteran merchant the weak constitution and the eventual untimely death of his only son were a terrible affliction. His hopes and affections then centered upon the little grandsons as those who were to perpetuate his honored name and to conserve his great fortune. Young Marshall Field 3d especially became the apple of his eye.

Trust Fund for Children.

In accordance with the terms of the will a special trust fund of $5,000,000 has been already set aside for the benefit of these three grandchildren. The trustees of this fund are the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank, Chauncey Keep and Arthur B. Jones, private secretary to the late merchant, who took the place as trustee of Marshall Field, Jr., originally named in the will.

Marshall Field, Jr., having died before his father, this special $5,000,000 trust fund is to be administered for the benefit of the three grandchildren and their eventual heirs, if any, subject to the provision, however, that the boys, Marshall and Henry, are each to receive twice as much of the income as does their sister Gwendolyn. The trustees are to pay to the children, or their mother or guardians, such sums from time to time as may be needed for their support and education, and are to reinvest the remainder of the income of each until each grandchild reaches the age of twenty-five. After that age the trustees are to pay to each child in quarterly installments one-half of the income of his or her share until the legatee is thirty-five years old. After that age the grandchildren are to be paid the full incomes of their respective shares in quarterly amounts.

In case one of the grandchildren dies, leaving children, the respective shares of the fund are to be held in trust for those great-grandchildren until the youngest reaches the age of twenty-one. At that time the trustees are directed to divide the entire capital and accrued income of the trust fund among the great-grandchildren in the proportion of the shares allotted their parents. This will wind up the administration and disposition of the $5,000,000 trust fund.

The entire residuary estate is to be held in trust for the benefit of the two grandsons, Marshall and Henry. Marshall and his heirs are eventually to receive three-fifths and Henry and his heirs two-fifths of the estate.

Marshall Is Favored.

Out of the major share of the capital Marshall, upon attaining the age of twenty-five, is to receive $450,000 "for his own use absolutely," and like sums when he reaches the age of thirty, thirty-five and forty years. In similar manner, out of the minor portion of the residuary estate Henry is to receive $300,000 when he is twenty-five and likewise when he attains the age of thirty, thirty-five and forty years.

In addition to this provision respecting the capital he will directs that one-half of the income of the respective shares of the residuary estate shall be held in trust and reinvested until the grandsons shall respectively reach the age of forty-five. When each grandson is forty-five he is to be paid this portion of the income held in trust, together with its accumulations. If the grandchild should die before receiving this payment the portion is to be added to his share of the capital for disposition to his heirs.

The remaining one-half portion of the income of the respective shares is to be held in trust and reinvested until each of the grandsons attains the age of thirty years, after which time he will receive in quarterly installments one-third of the half portion of the income from his share. The remaining two-thirds of the half portion of the income is to be reinvested and added to the capital. This is to be done until the grandsons are thirty-five. After reaching this age each grandson will receive two-thirds of the half portion of the income from his share, while the remaining third will be reinvested. This arrangement is to obtain until the grandsons are forty years old, when each shall receive thenceforth the entire half of the income from his share. Not till the grandsons are forty-five years old will they receive the entire incomes from their shares.

When Marshall becomes fifty years of age the final division of the estate is to be made. Marshall will then receive three-fifths of the capital and accumulations, and at the same time Henry will receive his share of two-fifths. If Henry should survive Marshall he will at the age of fifty receive his share of the estate.

In case either or both of the grandsons should die leaving children the trustees are to divide each grandson's share among his heirs when the youngest heir is twenty-one years old. In the event of these great grandchildren dying before reaching the age of twenty-one the trustees are to pay the respective shares to the great-great-grandchildren, if any.

If Line Should Run Out.

In case the line of either grandson should run out before the distribution of the estate his share is to go to the other or his heirs. In case both the grandsons should die or their lines become extinct before the distribution of the estate Gwendolyn is to receive one-fourth of the residuary estate. This portion is to be held in trust during her lifetime and divided among her heirs.

The remaining three-quarters of the estate in this contingency the trustees are directed to divide equally among Mr. Field's brothers and sisters or their heirs.

At present these two young grandsons for whom a fond old man's hopes have cast so brilliant a horoscope are residing with their mother in England, where she has leased Danesbury, a fine country mansion in Hertfordshire. The lads are attending school at Eton, but are destined later to matriculate at Harvard. In a recently cabled interview their mother is quoted as having said in denial of the report that she proposed living permanently in England:

"The peaceful beauty of English country life appeals to me. Though I love London and its artistic circles, the country is always calling me. Washington will be my winter residence. After all, I am an American, and my boys must spend part of their boyhood in their native land.

"They are at Eton now acquiring the splendid attributes of an English gentleman, of which the historic school is so justly proud. After Eton they will go to Harvard. As to their future it is too early to say yet. They will not, however, go into business and I hope they will become politicians. My eldest boy follows even now the debates in the house of commons. His great wealth must be used for his country's good and that is why I have chosen Washington as my winter home. I want my boy to live in an atmosphere of politics.

Wants Wealth to be Blessing.

"American wealth is too often a terrible curse. I want it to be the greatest blessing to my boys, the means for the fulfillment of patriotic ambitions. That is my ideal and those are my hopes for the future."

This is the description made not long ago by a writer in the Chicago Tribune of the personality of the little Marshall Field of today, for whom his mother cherishes such broad ambitions and on whom his grandfather has lavished untold riches:

"A frail, slender body, composed mostly of nerves; a classic, thoughtful face, set above well built shoulders; a splendid mouth; clear, grave eyes, deep set; a distinguished little figure; a natural reserve that may prove to be the symbol of inner power—that is the lad who is destined to become Chicago's foremost millionaire, the sole bearer of the name of Marshall Field.

"He has been a sickly child. The boy's father, Marshall Field, Jr., was a victim of ill health all his life. The father's physique probably was inherited from his mother, Mrs. Nannie Scott Field, the first Mrs. Marshall Field. Tracing out the life of young Marshall Field is much like enumerating the critical scenes in a tragedy. During his early boyhood he suffered a series of illnesses, and the marked love of the grandfather for the boy was only heightened by these attacks. Three years ago the lad while riding was thrown from his horse and nearly killed. Inflammatory rheumatism followed, and for a time it was felt that the boy could not possibly survive. The devoted grandfather often spent hours of anxious watching at the lad's bedside.

"On January 21, 1905, a year lacking only a few days before the quick succession of sad events left him sole bearer of the great name, Marshall Field's condition was pronounced almost hopeless. It was feared his heart would fail, so great was the lad's weakness. Stimulants were administered. The boy's life hung by the merest thread. Then he rallied. After that last, long and trying illness Marshall Field was taken to Lakewood, N. J., his grandfather accompanying him on the trip. After a stay of a few weeks there Mr. and Mrs. Field departed for Italy with their children. Under cloudless skies the little fellow slowly regained his strength. Then followed the return home, the series of tragic events that made him fatherless, as the result of a gunshot wound, and culminated in the death of the man who had carved the name Marshall Field in its high place.

"Such has been the life of the boy Field—a life beset by the cruelest ogres that a vivid child's imagination is able to picture—the ogres of ill health, of death, of grief."

SOME STORIES OF THE GREAT MANSFIELD

Associates Tell of His Charities and Recall Many Persons He Aided and the Large Sums He Gave to the Poor—Had Much Fear of Fast Trains—His Habit of Discharging Employes and Forgetting About It—His Love for His Son.

Many stories were always current about Richard Mansfield during his lifetime, but many that were never told before were repeated during the past week by men who knew him and who wished to pay their tribute to his memory. While all the world has heard of his quick temper, few knew of his deeds of charity, and he possessed many interesting peculiarities and eccentricities that were not generally discussed until after his death.

Small things would irritate him beyond all reason, and he had a way of discharging members of his company on very trivial grounds, and of paying no attention usually when he saw them about afterward. When he was dealing in theaters with employes over whom he had no direct control he adopted the same arbitrary manner and usually with the same result.

Since the construction of the New Amsterdam theater he had never appeared elsewhere in New York. The men who worked in the house were instructed that if Mr. Mansfield told them they were discharged they should say nothing in reply, and that they were discharged—for the moment—and should leave and then return to their posts as soon as he was out of the way. He discharged various men there, without authority of course, including the carpenter and the electrician.

When he first appeared in the theater he had a dressing room some distance above the stage, which he had to reach by an elevator. After two or three trips above he became very much annoyed, and sent an attendant to find Marc Klaw, one of the owners. When Mr. Klaw arrived Mr. Mansfield, who seemed very angry, turned upon him and exclaimed:

"Your theater is very beautiful inside, but it is like a miserable hotel, and when I come up here on the elevator I feel like pressing the button and ordering some ice water."

"Well then, why don't you do it," replied Mr. Klaw. "You would get fine carbonated water."

The actor's humor changed and he made no more complaints. Being his own manager, he wished to have a dressing room from which he could command the stage, and one was built especially for him. After he had moved into it he noticed a mechanic who was skylarking, having nothing to do at the moment. He rushed down and cried:

"You are discharged. Go away and never enter this theater again. I shall inform Klaw & Erlianger tomorrow."

His Own Employe.

The man, who happened to be an employe of the Mansfield company, your conduct to Klaw & Erlianger." ly put on his hat and coat, went out one door, came in another, resumed work and that ended the episode.

At the beginning of the run of "Ivan the Terrible" Mr. Mansfield would not take any curtain calls. The first night audience kept on applauding for five minutes, but he refused to appear. At the end of the play on the second night Mr. Mansfield concluded to say a few words. As he was advancing the asbestos curtain was let down, and he turned angrily on the stage carpenter and said:

"I shall not enter this theater again until you have been discharged. You must leave here now. I shall report your conduct to Klaw & Erlanger."

The stage carpenter accepted his discharge with good grace and continued his work as usual. In his own company every employe was discharged from time to time. One little fellow, who had been discharged probably ninety times, was recognized by Mr. Mansfield one evening. The actor looked around at the others present and said to the manager, Ben Stevens:

"Dear me! I have discharged them all, but it does not seem to have any effect."

He was very ill when he last appeared at the New Amsterdam theater, and he complained to Malcom Douglas, manager of the house, about the stage noises. He seemed to think that the men intended to annoy him, whereas the fact was that all were as quiet as they could be, but that the stage settings jarred on his nerves. He suggested to Mr. Douglas that they should jointly hire a policeman, whose duty would be to stand about and whenever he heard any loud talk or unnecessary noise to take the offender by the scruff of the neck and to throw him into the street.

"It was Mr. Mansfield who first suggested my doing any work for a theater," said Mr. Douglas yesterday. "I had written over my signature some criticisms of his work at the Pike Opera house, Cincinnati, when he sent for me and suggested that I should collaborate with him in writing a 'Don Juan' play. As friends informed me that I could not get along with him for two days, I did not accept. After I had become manager of the New Amsterdam, he came here and played in 'Beau Brummel.' I was whispering to the carpenter of the stage when he approached, made a clucking sound with his tongue and said, 'Who is it?' I replied, 'I am the manager of the house,' and he clucked again and passed with a glance of pity or contempt that almost overpowered me. Sometime afterward, I told him that he had been the first to propose that I should do anything for a theater.

"'Is it possible?' he returned. 'It is a very poor business.'

"'Yes,' said I, 'we have both found that so.'"

Couldn't Remember Faces.

Mr. Mansfield was not only very nearsighted, but his memory for faces was wretched and he was apt to be preoccupied by his thoughts and not to notice persons who passed him. He felt hurt at the charges of rudeness frequently made against him and he declared that he was persistently maligned.

"Mr. Mansfield was a guest at the Detroit board of commerce a year ago last April," said Morris Greet, who was for several years associated with him. "We went to the dinner together after the performance, about half-past 11 o'clock, and he was given a wonderful reception. Most of the speaking was over when we got there. He spoke in favor of having Secretary Taft the next candidate for the presidency. Mr. Taft's name had not previously been mentioned, and the newspapers were filled with comments on the subject the next day.

"He had many great ideas about commercial projects, and once while we were in Philadelphia he took up the idea of purchasing a great steamship line between this country and Jamaica, so big a proposition that if it had gone through he would have become at a jump one of the great steamship men of the country. He actually obtained an option on the line and he was most enthusiastic about it. At that time we were just starting work on a reproduction of 'The Scarlet Letter' after a lapse of ten years. He was upset and excited about the dramatic arrangements when three men arrived from New York to make the steamer deal with him. Bang! It was all off. He did not wish to have anything more to do with it. The play had driven everything else out of his head.

"We were afterward producing 'The Scarlet Letter' in Boston and there

- Tuesday—"Wedded, But No Wife."
- Wednesday—"A Fight for Honor."
- Thursday—"A Boy of the Streets."
- Friday—"Big Hearted Jim."
- Saturday—"Midnight in Chinatown."
- Daily Matinees.

THE TRUST BUSTERS TONIGHT.

Lots of fun and foolishness, with many good songs and specialties by the principals and chorus is promised at the Majestic tonight, when the "Trust Busters" appear. A big audience greatly enjoyed the performance this afternoon and the advance sale for tonight is large.

MORGAN STOCK COMPANY ALL NEXT WEEK — DAILY MATINEES.

Morgan's comedians, in high class comedies and dramas, with polite vaudeville between acts, are billed at the Majestic for one week, starting Monday matinee with "The Orphan's Prayer."

This organization has met with splendid success wherever they have appeared and as Fort Wayne theater goers are at present very partial to this very popular sort of amusement, another big week is sure at the Majestic. Of this company the Madison, Wis., Democrat says:

"The people are becoming acquainted with Morgan's comedians and as a result last night the Grand was filled to capacity and there was not a single dissatisfied person in all the large house. The play was 'Wedded, But No Wife,' and it was without doubt one of the best bills that has been presented here in some time, either by a stock company or a one-night stand company. The pretty story was told in an excellent manner and that the house appreciated the piece was shown by the frequent applause.

"Hila Morgan appeared last evening as a little Bowery waif who had been sent out among the green fields and the singing birds by a fresh air society. Miss Blanch Henson was the wronged wife, handling the part in a manner that satisfied even the most critical. Elsie Morgan, as the adventuress, had the costume part of the piece, and her gowns were fully in keeping with the part. Her lines were excellently delivered and her stage presence was pleasing, to say the least. In short, she did full justice to the part."

"STRONGHEART."

In Ralph Stuart's play, "Strongheart," which comes to the Majestic September 18 and 19, there is not a person in the cast over thirty-five years old. In fact, the star himself, who is the eldest, is just past thirty-four. There are twenty-five people in the cast of "Strongheart," the scenes of which are laid at Columbia University, New York, and youth predominates the whole play. The first act shows the rooms of two of the students who are giving an afternoon tea with a number of other friends to some ladies. It would be rather difficult, perhaps, to find a lot of young chaps and young women more smartly dressed, or as good looking as those to be seen in "Strongheart."

RETURN OF "THE LIO NAND MOUSE."

After witnessing "The Lion and the Mouse," which Henry B. Harris will offer at the Majestic September 20 and 21, one is willing to believe that it possesses every essential of a perfectly constructed play. In dramatic strength it is unequalled by anything seen on the stage for a generation; its story is fascinatingly interesting and intensely human; the characters are men and women prominent in the social, financial and political world of today and they are made to act just like the types we are familiar with. Charles Klein has written other plays which have brought him very prominently before the public, but he has never created one that has earned the deep gratitude all those feel who witness "The Lion and the Mouse."

"AN OLD SWEETHEART OF MINE."

Seldom has a play been hailed with such universal favor everywhere as the new Texas romance, "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," written for and played by W. A. Whitecar, who will be seen here in the near future. Life on the western plains is portrayed with skill, the characters are true to their environment, the action brisk and the scenes full of local color.

Mr. Whitecar will be remembered as Jack Lumley in "The Mummy and Humming Bird."

"GEORGE WASHINGTON, JR."

The most notable booking of the early season in the musical comedy line will be the engagement at the Majestic of the Cohan & Harris comedians in "George Washington, Jr.," a musical play in three acts and four scenes, which will be presented by a very superior company, assisted by a Cohanesque chorus of beauty and ability. Willis B. Sweatnam will be seen in his original role of Eaton Ham. Mr. Sweatnam is one of the best known delineators of darky characters who has ever appeared upon the American stage. Long a star in the best minstrel companies touring the country, he became known to thousands of theater-goers, but his work was crowned with its greatest success when he created the role of Eaton Ham, one of Mr. Cohan's most delightful character drawings. The character is that of a "tip-hunting" negro, who has charge of the grounds surrounding the home of the father of his country at Mount Vernon, Va. The title role formerly played by George M. Cohan is this season assumed by Carter DeHaven, a clever young comedian who has long been identified as a headliner in vaudeville. Mr. DeHaven is peculiarly suited by nature to the George M. Cohan roles, and was personally secured by Mr. Cohan over two years ago for the character of "George Washington, Jr." Other prominent members of the company are: Flora Parker, Leona Anderson, Lola Hoffman, Jack Rafael, John A. Boone, Frank McNish, Jr., Edward Lester, John Kauffman, Lee Myers, Joseph Leslie and a Cohanesque chorus of thirty.

TEMPLE THEATRE

Five Star Comedy Acts to Enliven Patrons Monday Afternoon.

The new bill opening at the Temple theater Monday afternoon will be headed by America's foremost musical artists, Youngs and Brooks. They are creating a furore in Chicago at the Olympic theater, where they are now playing. They are a sensation everywhere.

Clayton, Jenkins and Jasper, eccentric comiques, appeared last season as a headline act and they will be seen again in "The Darktown Circus" stunt.

Wharton and LeRoy, vaudeville's premier singing and talking comedians, will appear in their new act entitled "The Cherry Tree." Their act is full of good singing, interspersed with much comedy, and is one of the big hits in vaudeville.

Other big features are the Vagges, the world's most marvelous bag punchers; Mr. and Mrs. Neill Lichfield, in a refined comedy sketch, and the new Temple orchestra under the direction of Prof. Dicey.

That everybody goes to the Temple is no joke, for the house has been crowded daily and it is a wonder where all of the people come from. Suffice to say a good show will always do business.

ANGUS FRASER.

THE "KILTIES" ARE COMING

This city is soon to be visited by the most famous band in Canada and one which is known on both sides of the Atlantic, not only for its unique uniform, but for its remarkable musical record. The Kilties, who are all Scotch-Canadians, have, in the past seven years, appeared in all the principal cities in Canada, the United States, Mexico, England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales. They dress in the attractive costume of the Highlanders, and carry with them the American champion bagpiper, sword, sailors' hornpipe and highland fling dancer, Mr. Angus MacMillan Fraser, who dances and pipes at every performance.

The Kilties not only play the music of the national composers, but are equally at home with the popular music of the day, and therefore their concerts are particularly pleasing to the large audiences which always greet them.

The management of this popular musical organization has made an international success because none but the best players in every sense of the word are seen in the band, and the high standard originally set has always been kept up.

The Kilties will be heard at Robison park theater on Monday evening, when the public will be able to judge the verdict of the public at large, which has so emphatically put its stamp of approval on the Kilties.

Mr. Albert Cook, conducior of the Kilties, has the band under perfect control, without resorting to gymnastics.

A musical organization of the importance and renown of the Kilties must necessarily have for its leader a man of highest ability. In the person of Mr. Albert Cook, the director, this leader is found. Mr. Cook is a striking example of a man who not only knows music, but can impart to those under him his ideas of how compositions should be played. In the Kilties, Canada's remarkable band, which has visited seven countries and is now on its fifteenth tour, Mr. Cook has most sympathetic material, and with it he achieves results that take his hearers by storm.

Nothing but praise is ever heard for the band, because every man in it is an artist, individually working for the success of the whole, and under the direction of a master they could not help achieving that success.

It is not necessary for Mr. Cook to descend to eccentricities in order to secure good work from his men; and throughout all his leading the gymnastics indulged in by some leaders are noticeable by their absence. His splendid figure, set up like a soldier's, is not required to twist and turn and jump about to secure the results he desires from the musicians, and the ease with which he leads them comes as a distinct relief to audiences overweary of "eccentric" poses.

The Kilties appear in this city on Monday evening at Robison park theater with Mr. Cook leading, supplemented by a male choir of sixteen voices and Mr. Angus MacMillan Fraser, the American champion bagpiper, sword, sailor's hornpipe and Highland fling dancer.

Stomach troubles, Heart and Kidney ailments, can be quickly corrected with a prescription known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. The prompt and surprising relief which this remedy immediately brings is entirely due to its Restorative action upon the controlling nerves of the Stomach, etc.

A weak Stomach, causing dyspepsia, a weak Heart with palpitation or intermittent pulse, always means weak Stomach nerves, or weak Heart nerves. Strengthen these inside or controlling nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative and see how quickly these ailments disappear. Dr. Shoop, of Racine, Wis., will mail samples free. Write for them. A test will tell. Your health is certainly worth this simple trial. Sold by all dealers. Th-S

JOHN DREW IN HIS NEW PLAY

New York, Sept. 7.—There is a particular charm about the Empire theater. Perhaps it's the atmosphere of the plays that have been produced there; perhaps it is the fact that it is more or less the theatrical home of two such interesting individualities as Maude Adams and John Drew. We have few distinctive theaters these days in New York. The Empire is one—it seems to have traditions, though it is really a mere maiden of playhouses. In any case the shortest theatrical memory is bound to enter it with the intellectual quiet produced by the reflection that, if nothing else, it has opened up such things as Barrie's "Peter Pan," Pinero's "House in Order" and Thomas' "De Lancy."

Therefore into such a house one comes with a certain mental attitude. Saturday night the season opened with an English adaptation of Gerault's and Charnay's four act comedy, "Josette, Ma Femme." Mr. Michael Morton did the English and calls it "My Wife." It is not too much to say that in a mild, light way the new play will satisfy the hand made "traditions" of the Empire.

"My Wife" has her faults, but after all they are of minor importance when one considers her merits. The structure is artificial; it is of the day and manner of Scribe and Labiche, but the touch and the tone is of Meilhac, and that surely is enough to atone for the few moments when the authors seemed just a trifle too slow in their progress. The "well made" comedy like "My Wife" is not the kind of play that is being turned out so plentifully in France now, for we are all supposed to be very much interested in more serious things—characterization, philosophy, ethics, etc.

Mr. Drew's return to the light comedy was evidently most welcome to his admirers, who were in the theater in numbers and gave him an enthusiastic greeting.

It is difficult, however, to comment separately on his own distinguished acting apart from that of the company, which was even and excellent throughout. Miss Belle Burke, an American, who is unknown in her own country as an actress, came to us with an English reputation. She has a great deal of charm and filled the role of Trixie so well that one could not help but wonder what powers she would be able to disclose in other parts. For the time being it is sufficient to say that she shared with Mr. Drew the plaudits of the evening. Miss Dorothy Tennant, Mr. Fred Gottschalk and Mr. Morton Selten were among the others in the cast.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

TWINS 75 YEARS OLD TO CELEBRATE THEIR BIRTHDAY

Marion County Pair First Saw Light There When Country Was New.

Indianapolis, Sept. 7.—Two seventy-five-year-old "boys," Cary and Perry Hoover, twin brothers, who were born in Marion county and have spent their lives, embracing three-quarters of a century, within its boundaries, have sent out invitations for a birthday party to be held September 15 at Maywood, at the home of the brother Cary.

The invitations bear small photographs of the two brothers and the dates "1832-1907," together with an announcement of the "party" to which all friends of the family are invited. It is explained that those not receiving cards will be just as welcome as those who do.

The birthday anniversary properly falls on September 13, but the celebration will be held the following Sunday. The state fair and other counter attractions made a postponement advisable.

The twins are the youngest sons of Andrew Hoover, who settled near Maywood so many years ago that the exact date is not now known. The home place was built on a tract of land obtained from the government. This tract is still owned by the family.

Farmer and Grocer.

Cary Hoover has spent his entire life on the Maywood farm, tilling it and building up an enviable reputation as a farmer. His twin brother Perry abandoned the farm some years ago and engaged in the grocery business. He has a store in Kenwood avenue, between Illinois street and Capitol avenue, and may be found any day filling the orders of his patrons.

Children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, together with other relatives and friends, will participate in the joint birthday celebration. On Cary's side of the twinship are nine grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. Perry has only one grandchild.

Children of the twins, who are planning the birthday party, wish it understood that all friends of the Hoover family will be cordially received.

KNEE BREECHES FOR BENNY.

Mother Bars Long Trousers to Keep Boy a Boy.

New York, Sept. 7.—The petition which Bennie Cohn's schoolmates in the senior class of the Orange high school got up this week in an effort to persuade Max Cohn, the boy's father, to equip his son with long trousers proved futile, because of Mamma Cohn's desire to keep her boy a boy as long as possible.

The petition was delivered yesternoon by mail because that was thought the safest way. Last night Mr. Cohn said that he was not responsible for the knickerbockers Bennie wears, and that it was his mother who objected to the long trousers.

"Yes," said Mrs. Conn, "I refused to let Bennie have long trousers. You see, my children are growing up fast enough, and, as Bennie is the last of my boys, I want to keep him young as long as possible. Of course, it is natural that the boy wants to be like his friends, but you know that he will have to wear long trousers long enough, and it will not do him any harm to delight my eyes in short ones a little while longer.

HURT IN ESCAPING BLACKMAIL.

St. Louis Man Overhears Plot, Leaps From Window and Sprains Ankle.

St. Louis, Sept. 7.—Claiming to be the victim of a blackmail plot, George C. Sedgwick, 43 years old, is at the City hospital suffering from a sprained ankle received in jumping from a second story window of the Milton hotel. He said he heard two girls in an adjoining room planning to invite him in to see them and then hold him up. He locked his door, and then one of the girls complained to a man across the hall that he had attacked her sister. The man called the clerk of the hotel and Sedgwick jumped from the window, hoping to escape and avoid notoriety.

WHEN FIRST RAILROAD TRAIN REACHED ANGOLA

Old Citizens Recall the Arrival of Fort Wayne Line.

The arrival of the second steam railroad into Angola last week, says the Angola Magnet, recalls to the minds of the older inhabitants of the city the more important event of the arrival of the first train that ever broke the stillness of the primeval forests of Steuben county, over the Fort Wayne, Jackson and Saginaw railway, now a branch of the New York Central lines. The road was built into Angola from the north, and like all great public enterprises was generously supported and as vigorously opposed by the citizens of that time. A. W. Hendry, G. W. McConnell, Orville Carver, F. Macartney and J. A. Woodhull were energetic factors in its construction and were assisted by a score or more whose names are not so easily recalled. Over $100,000 was subscribed in stock by Steuben county people living contingent to the line of the road through the county, and by election an additional subsidy of $50,000 was raised. This public grant was strongly opposed by people living in the most remote parts of the county, just as such opposition arises today. One man said that the need of the road was imaginary, and that a mule team could draw all the freight in a yellow wagon in one load that would be brought into the county in a year.

Thirty-Seven Years Ago.

The first train arrived in January or February, 1870, thirty-seven years ago, and stopped at a point just north of the old mill, as far as the line had been constructed. The day was one of rejoicing, although no especial demonstration had been arranged for the occasion. Landy Downing ran the train and was the first conductor. He left the company shortly and returned to the Pere Marquette line, and was succeeded by Curley Smith and George Mogford. Mr. Mogford, until recent years, was a conductor on this line, taking the position in March, 1870. He is still in active service on other branches of the New York Central lines, with runs out of Hillsdale. L. J. Wheeler and Girard Shipman were the first engineers. Henry Linder was the first station agent. The first depot was a small frame structure built on Maumee street and was later succeeded by the old Morse house, which was since destroyed by fire.

Regular service was instituted at once, only one train a day running in to Angola, and another train from Jackson to Reading only, until in May when two trains ran into Angola each day excepting Sunday. The first train was run through to Fort Wayne in November 15, 1870, with Mr. Mogford as conductor, and after that regular service was established.

Were Insignificant Affairs.

The first trains into Angola were insignificant affairs beside the huge engines and vestibuled trains of today. For a long time but a single coach was run, with a red caboose for baggage, mail and express. The engines weighed about twenty-five tons, and were wood burners. Wood docks were erected at nearly every station for furnishing fuel for engines. There were no air brakes in those days, the braking being done by hand, and the whole equipment of the road was crude.

Speaking on this subject recently, Mr. Francis Macartney, who has personal recollection of the times, said the beneficial effect on the community was immediate. Among the earliest shipments into Angola was a carload of Saginaw salt, and on that day the price of salt dropped $1.15 a barrel from the prevailing price of $3.00. Markets were at once established and drew to Angola and other Steuben county points a large amount of trade that had gone to Lagrange and Lima to reach the G. R. & I. road, and to Waterloo to reach the air line of the Lake Shore. In taxes alone the road has since paid into the county an amount considerably more than the donations made.

Change in Corporation.

The corporation under which the road was constructed was known as the Fort Wayne, Jackson and Saginaw railway. Judge Woodhull was one of the directors, and he says that the road continued that way for about twelve years, when it no longer could pay expenses because of the reduced freight rates. A new company was formed, known as the Fort Wayne and Jackson railway, which took over the line and leased it to the Lake Shore system for a period of ninety-nine years. The stockholders in the Fort Wayne and Jackson company receive 5 per cent. annually on the stock from the New York Central line, and hold nominal meetings every year. At the time the Fort Wayne and Jackson company absorbed the first company there was $70,000 in the treasury, which shows the line was ably managed as far as the conditions would permit. Through train service was at one time running from Saginaw to Cincinnati. In point of distant connections the service was even better than it is today.

Of Interest To Women.

To such women as are not seriously out of health, but who have exacting duties to perform, either in the way of household cares or in social duties and functions which seriously tax their strength, as well as to nursing mothers, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has proved a most valuable supporting tonic and invigorating nervine. By its timely use, much serious sickness and suffering may be avoided. The operating table and the surgeons' knife, would, it is believed, seldom have to be employed if this most valuable woman's remedy were resorted to in good time. The "Favorite Prescription" has proven a great boon to expectant mothers by preparing the system for the coming of baby, thereby rendering childbirth safe, easy, and almost painless.

Bear in mind, please that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is not a secret or patent medicine, against which the most intelligent people are quite naturally averse, because of the uncertainty as to their composition and harmless character, but is a MEDICINE OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, a full list of all its ingredients being printed, in plain English, on every bottle-wrapper. An examination of this list of ingredients will disclose the fact that it is non-alcoholic in its composition, chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine taking the place of the commonly used alcohol, in its make-up. In this connection it may not be out of place to state that the "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. Pierce is the only medicine put up for the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, and sold through druggists, all the ingredients of which have the unanimous endorsement of all the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice, and that too as remedies for the ailments for which "Favorite Prescription" is recommended.

A little book of these endorsements will be sent to any address, post-paid, and absolutely free if you request same by postal card, or letter, of Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. Constipation is the cause of many diseases. Cure the cause and you cure the disease. Easy to take as candy.

BIG SKULL FOUND IN RIVER.

Scientists Puzzled by Bones Discovered Below Vincennes.

Mt. Carmel, Ind., Sept. 7.—Floating down the Wabash river eight miles below Vincennes the mammoth skull of some gigantic prehistoric creature was found yesterday by a fisherman. The great piece of bone is four feet six inches across and is three inches thick.

Local scientists believe the animal lived over 4,000 years ago and that it was a species of buffalo, which, scientists say, often reached 10,000 pounds in weight.

The big skull is on exhibition in this city.

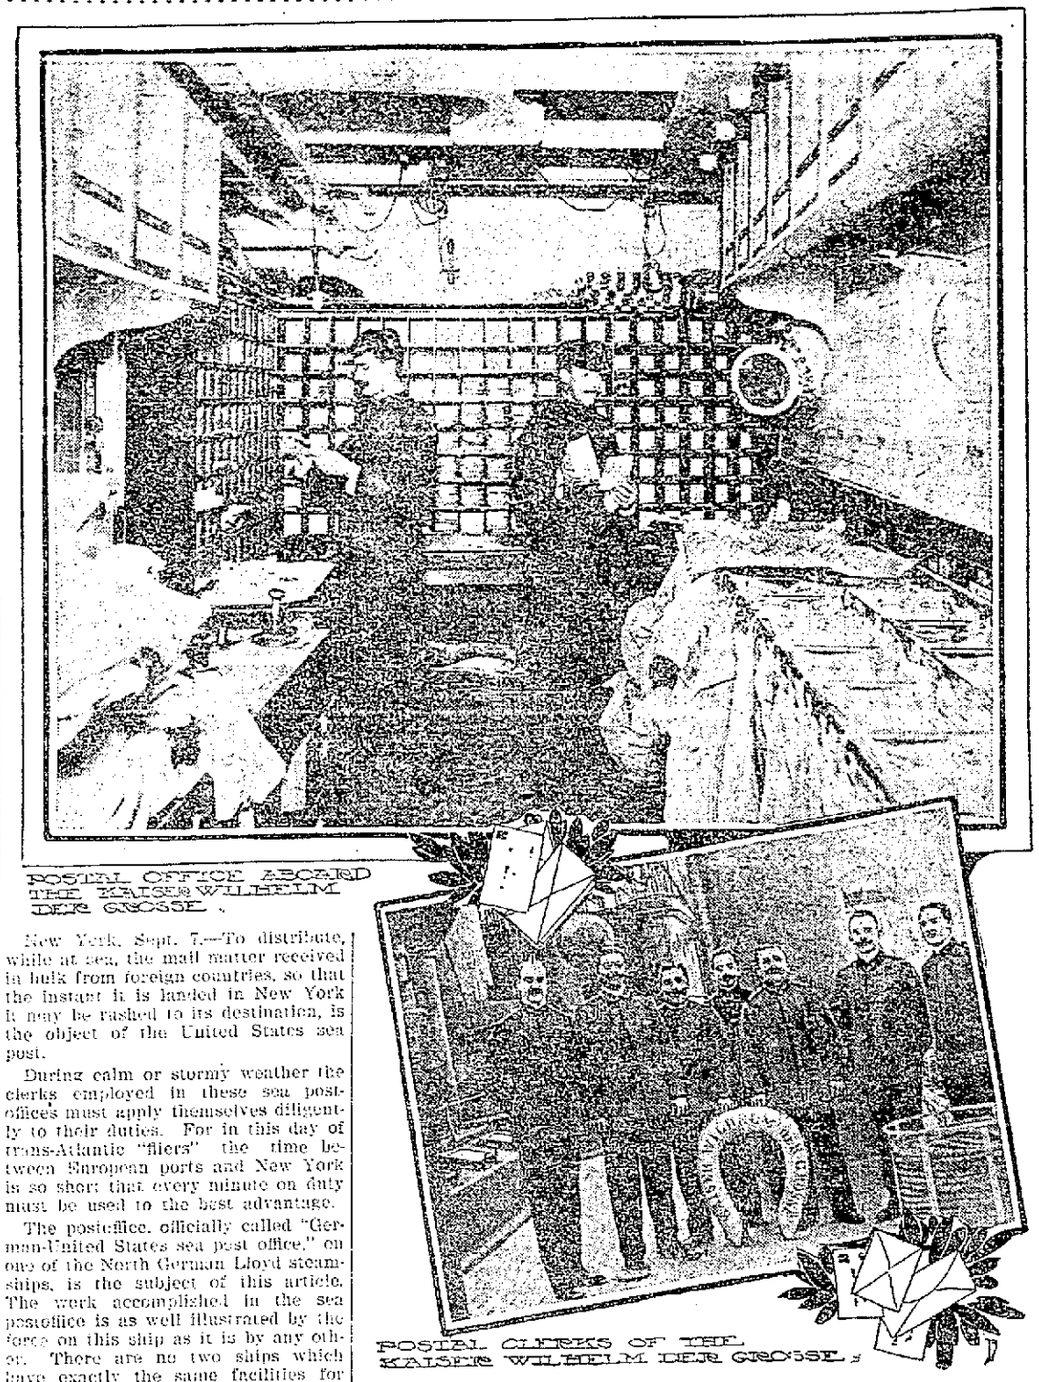
HOW MAIL IS SORTED BY SEA POSTMEN ON OCEAN LINERS



POSTAL OFFICE ABOARD THE KAISER WILHELM DER GROSSE.

POSTAL CLERKS OF THE KAISER WILHELM DER GROSSE.

New York, Sept. 7.—To distribute, while at sea, the mail matter received in bulk from foreign countries, so that the instant it is landed in New York it may be rushed to its destination, is the object of the United States sea post.

During calm or stormy weather the clerks employed in these sea postoffices must apply themselves diligently to their duties. For in this day of trans-Atlantic "fliers" the time between European ports and New York is so short that every minute on duty must be used to the best advantage.

The postoffice, officially called "German-United States sea post office," on one of the North German Lloyd steamships, is the subject of this article. The work accomplished in the sea postoffice is as well illustrated by the force on this ship as it is by any other. There are no two ships which have exactly the same facilities for handling and working the mails at sea, but the routine of work in all sea postoffices is practically the same. The regular postoffice force on this and on each of the other three fast ships of this line is composed of seven men. There are two German secretaries, three German subalterns and two American clerks. In addition to this force, the steamship company is required to furnish all the help necessary for handling the sacks.

On the Hamburg-American line the office force is smaller by one subaltern because the quantity of mail received on that line is not so heavy as that received on the North German Lloyd.

During the voyage to Europe on the German ships the German clerks assume charge of the more intricate part of the distribution of mails for Germany and the American clerks assist with the simpler part. On the voyage to the United States the reverse order obtains—the Americans take charge of the more difficult part of the distribution, while the Germans perform the primary duties.

The postoffices on the American and White Star lines are called "British-United States sea postoffices." The force on these lines is composed of two British and two American clerks, with all the sailor help necessary to handle the sacks, etc. The routine in these postoffices is the same as that in operation in the German-United States offices—i. e., the Germans are in charge in one direction, the Americans are in charge in the opposite direction.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT IS EXPECTED TO MAKE A PROTEST

Treatment of Sikhs by Mob at Bellingham, Wash., May Cause Trouble.

Washington, Sept. 7.—While no information of an official character has reached the state department as yet concerning the summary and violent expulsion of the Sikhs from Bellingham, Wash., Thursday, it is confidently expected, if the facts were as reported in the press, Ambassador Bryce will soon be heard from. The British government takes pride above all things in protecting the lives and property of its subjects, so it is expected that as soon as the British consular officer, who is reported to be looking into the matter, has completed his investigation and communicated with the summer home of the British embassy at Intervale, N. H., formal complaint will be lodged with the state department.

All that the state department can do in such a case as that at Bellingham is to follow the well worn precedents established in Wyoming, Louisiana, California, and elsewhere in cases where foreigners have been mobbed or killed. That is, the department in the name of the president may address the governor of Washington, transmitting, perhaps, the complaint of the British embassy, if there should be one, and requesting him to take steps to prevent a recurrence of the trouble. Such appeals have generally been effective and doubtless would be in this case. If, owing to local antipathy on the part of white people of Bellingham to the Hindoo colony, it should be found impossible to secure justice at the hands of the local judiciary, then, as was done in the case of the murderous attacks upon the Chinese at Rock Springs, Wyo., and upon the Italians in New Orleans some years ago, the executive will recommend to congress that indemnities be paid to the victims.

The British government, for its part, is likely to find itself embarrassed in dealing with the Bellingham incident because of the ever present danger of similar attacks upon the East Indians, who are numerous in British Columbia.

TRUSTEES STAND PAT.

Advance May Be Without a High School This Year.

Advance, Ind., Sept. 7.—The contention between school patrons and William Miller, trustee of the township, growing out of the employment of Mr. Payne, principal of the Zionsville school last year, as superintendent of the schools here, to which the patrons excepted, has aroused much feeling, and it is now said that Mr. Miller has concluded not to conduct a high school here during the coming year. The law requires only one high school in each township, and if the trustee is determined, students desiring high school training will have to enter at Jamestown or else Lebanon. Between thirty and forty young men and women are said to be vitally affected by this resolve on the part of the trustee. Trustee Miller contends that he made the contract with Mr. Payne in good faith, and that the township will abide by it or else contest in the courts the reason why.

ODD FELLOWS' BIG YEAR.

Greatest Increase in Membership Known Since Organization.

Indianapolis, Sept. 7.—The reports to be read at the meeting of the Sovereign Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., in St. Paul, Monday, September 16, will show that the order has made the biggest increase of any year in its history. Since the last meeting the membership has been increased by 84,245 in the subordinate lodges and 24,576 Sisters of Rebekah, bringing the total up to 1,709,533. By the end of 1908 the Sovereign officers of the lodge expect its membership to exceed 2,000,000.

The order has expended $5,005,753 for relief in the last year. Its receipts have been $15,168,000—a gain of more than a million dollars. The various Odd Fellows' homes have cost $397,000.

Among the states, Indiana ranks second in membership, having 72,578; first in encampment membership, 17,529; first in Rebekah membership, 43,648, and fourth in the amount paid for membership, $267,601.

WIFE'S CARL ANGERS MADMAN.

Terre Haute, Ind., Sept. 7.—Because his wife objected to his giving some potatoes to a child just recovering from typhoid fever, Ben Eaton brutally assaulted her yesterday afternoon, and, but for the interference of neighborbors and the police, might have killed her. Eaton had been drinking heavily and when he lost his job yesterday drank all the more until he was almost a madman.

The Eatons live in two squalid rooms where their two children have been near to death with typhoid fever. Mrs. Eaton is in a critical condition and a more serious charge may be filed against her assailant.

HOSLER ENTERS A BIG DRAFT TEAM FOR BIG FAIR

Percheron - Normans of Prodigious Size To Be Among Attractions.

John Hosler, who lives on the line between Huntington and Allen counties, has submitted to the fair association what will be in all probability the biggest double entry at the great show this season in the way of a Percheron-Norman draft team with a combined weight of more than two tons. One of the animals weighs 2,220 pounds while the little fellow of the combination carries only 2,180 pounds of horse flesh about with it.

This team has attracted wide attention all over the country this year and the best part of it is that while the horses enjoy the plaudits of the throngs during the few months of the county fairs, they are compelled to earn their living by menial labor the balance of the time and work regularly on the farm.

Another interesting entry of the day is the herd of fine short horns owned by Baird Bros., of Huntertown, who always favor the Great Fort Wayne Fair in preference to other cities because they take a pride in making the county show the best in the state.

Derby Day a Big Thing.

Derby day this season will be a big thing, as the purse offered for the chief race has been increased very materially and this fact insures the best entries. Saturday afternoon will be devoted to racers with the derby event the chief attraction on the card. Several steeple chasers will be on the ground and they will be sent over the jumps in one of the numbers on the race card.

The close of the week finds the preparatory work so satisfactorily advanced that the management is sure of a bigger and better fair than has ever been given in the history of Allen county.

ROLLS DOWN HILL TO GET AID.

Pennsylvania Man Bound by Robbers Lies Unconscious for Hours.

Easton, Pa., Sept. 7.—John Baier, a young man of this city, was waylaid and robbed while returning from a visit to the south side Thursday night. He was found yesterday bound and gagged. As Baier was passing a dark and lonely point he was struck from behind and felled. After recovering consciousness some time later, and being unable to undo his bonds, Baier rolled down a hill to a group of houses. Crawling on to a doorstep, he summoned aid. He could not describe his assailants, but said that he had been relieved of about $20.

UNCLE SAM INCREASES HIS DEPOSITS IN FORT WAYNE

Places $50,000 Additional in German-American —The Clearings.

The United States government has increased its deposits in Fort Wayne, placing an additional $50,000 with the German-American bank. This brings the total of government deposits in this bank up to $125,000.

The additional deposit is made under the recently announced purpose of Secretary Cortelyou, of the treasury department, to distribute more of the government cash over the country to assist in expediting the movement of crops, and the action is taken at a time when the demand for money is heaviest.

was trouble about getting shrubbery to place on the stage. Mr. Mansfield sent around for several loads of palms, and one of the papers on the following day commented that it had not known that the wilderness of Massachusetts had been covered with tropical palms."

"In metropolitan theaters," said Mr. Douglas, "no scenery is now kept, as companies are supposed to furnish all they need. Mr. Mansfield became excited when he found that we did not have a plain and a fancy chamber, a kitchen and a wood, traditional stock in an old time theater. He said the patrons would be much better satisfied if Klaw & Erlanger would furnish such things rather than so many gewgaws. We gave him what he wanted. In order to preserve quiet on the stage for him we gave orders to have the stage hands go into the street after setting a scene."

One matter that has thus far escaped attention is that Mr. Mansfield's last appearance on the stage was in "The Parisian Romance," in which he made his first phenomenal success. He was obscure and had difficulty in supporting himself until he took the part of Baron Chevrial and was proclaimed a great actor. His final performance at the New Amsterdam consisted of acts from five plays, concluding with "The Parisian Romance." During his last curtain call he made a pathetic little speech, expressing the hope that his public would not regard him as a thrower of mutton chops and a worrier of women, as he had been maliciously depicted.

Messages of condolence were received by Mrs. Mansfield from Richard Harding Davis, Mrs. Joseph Jefferson, Elsie Leslie, John Drew, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Wilson, Margaret Anglin, Blanche Bates, Mrs. A. M. Palmer, Eleanor Robson, John Wanamaker, Charles B. Brophy, William Winter, Charles H. Meltzer, Herman H. Kohlsaat, Booth Tarkington, Edward Marshall, E. H. Sothern and E. M. Holland.

THE MARKETS TODAY.

Although very large the wholesale and retail produce markets this morning were not as large as those of last Saturday, which was the largest of the season. The only new thing about the markets was the appearance of grapes on the retail, which went at 5c per quart. Spring chicken receipts were very heavy with a fair demand. Hens came in slowly, but the demand was very good. Butter receipts were moderate with a fair demand as the quality was poor. The cause of this is either poor milk and cream or else the country people are losing their art of making it as the butter for the past week or so has not been up to snuff. Egg demand was good but the receipts could not meet it, although the price remained the same. Potato receipts were moderate and the demand was fair, there not being much rush in either direction. A large supply of apples were on the market but it was easy. Tomatoes drug considerable and brought 75c.

Wheat is now up to 92c per bushel, the maximum price of this season and oats is also at its h eight, bringing 47c. The bullish condition of the outside markets and the condition in the northwest is the cause for these ascents and it is not known when they will stop. The market is very unstable and may ascend or decline any hour.

WILL SOON BE REOPENED.

Repairs on Old Fort Wayne Road Long Closed to Traffic.

(Roanoke Review.)

The portion of the old Fort Wayne-Huntington road from the "Indian Hill" northeast to the William R. Crabbs farm, which has been practically closed to travel for many years for want of a bridge over Eight Mile, bids fair to be opened soon. Several years ago the bridge was carried away by high waters, and two or more attempts were made to replace it, but defective workmanship and an effort to cut down the span to a point where it was insufficient rendered them failures. New cement abutments are now ready for the new bridge and they are reported to be excellent in workmanship and material. Samuel Iler, of Markle, was the contractor. William Swain, of Huntington, was the inspector.

SCHOOLBOY BECOMES INSANE.

South Bend, Ind., Sept. 7.—Made insane through overstudy Charley Griffen, a 12-year-old boy residing west of South Bend on a farm, came to the city yesterday and for a few minutes created a reign of terror in the west end business district. Armed with a big jackknife he rushed into grocery stores and shops and destroyed considerable stock. Possessed of tremendous insane strength he was more than a match for three men, who tried to capture him, and had it not been for his attempt to board a moving street car he might still be at large. When he tried to board the car he was heavily thrown and before he regained consciousness he had been securely bound by W. H. Young, a salesman. He will be taken to the insane hospital at Logansport.

STOCKS AND BONDS.

The Day on Wall Street.

New York, Sept. 7.—A drop of 1⅜ in Northern Pacific was the feature of the opening stock market caused by authoritative denials of yesterday's rumors of an intended 25 per cent extra dividend disbursement. The stock subsequently rallied 1¼. Great Northern preferred, the Erie Certificates, Reading and Pennsylvania also were down large fractions. Mexican Central rose ⅞. Otherwise the changes were small and mixed and the trading light.

The hesitation was replaced by a slightly firmer tone, which in turn was followed by a decided drop in prices, in which the western and metal stocks were most affected. Illinois Central opened 1¼ higher and Virginia-Carolina Chemical preferred 2.

The market closed easy and dull. Prices steadied at times but sold off after the appearance of the bank statement.

THE TABERNACLE

TENTH—In Cloud and Pillar Series

A STORY OF THE WILDERNESS JOURNEY OF THE HEBREW PEOPLE

By the "Highway and Byway" Preacher

(Copyright, 1906, by the author, W. E. Eaton.)

Scripture Authority:—Exodus 40: 17-38.

SERMONETTE.

The Tabernacle was the dwelling place of Jehovah among Israel. In its every detail of material and construction it typified the character and attributes of God, and expressed his attitude towards man, and indicated man's way of approach unto him. The Tabernacle and its appointed service was a type of the Christ and his redemptive work. It set forth in symbol that which found full and complete and glorious expression in the Christ. For full and beautiful unfolding of the meaning of the Tabernacle, read Needham's book, "Shadow and Substance."

1 Cor. 3:16, 17.

The Temple of God.—God's dwelling place to-day is in the midst of his people. All Christians form together one vast temple. "Ye are the temple," collectively, and "living stones," (1 Peter 2:5) individually. This spiritual temple is the dwelling place of the Holy Spirit, God's Viceregent on earth. In this spiritual house believers are the spiritual priesthood (Comp. Ex. 19:5, 6 with Rev. 1:6 and 5:10) with Jesus Christ, our high priest, as the literal priesthood, the one through whom our spiritual sacrifices are offered and made acceptable to God. (See 1 Peter 2:5) And what Moses could not do—that is, enter the Tabernacle because the presence of God filled it—Christ has done in that he has entered into the holy place not made with hands. "Seeing then that we have a great high priest, that is passed into the Heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession. For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are yet without sin. Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need. —Heb. 4:14-16.

THE STORY.

IT WAS evident that the inspection of the busy groups of workers in the camp of Israel had proved satisfactory, for Bezaleel, and Aholiab came into Moses' presence with beaming faces, and reading their report there, he exclaimed, before they had time to speak:

"Ah, it is a good report that thou bringest."

"Yea," replied Bezaleel, who as chief artificer, and the one in charge of all the work of preparing the materials for the Tabernacle and its fittings, acted as spokesman. "Yea, the workmen are putting the finishing strokes to the work, and all will be completed to-day, even to the cloths of service and the holy garments for Aaron, the priest and the garments for his sons, to minister in the Tabernacle."

"'Tis well," responded Moses, fervidly. "Knowest thou what day to-morrow will be?"

The two men shook their heads by way of answer, and Moses added:

"To-morrow will be the beginning of the second year as appointed by the Lord when he spoke to us in Egypt and gave us the Passover. How fitting that upon that day the Tabernacle should be set up in our midst. The Lord reward thee, Bezaleel, and thou, Aholiab, for thy faithfulness."

The two men bowed low in grateful recognition of the commendation of their leader, and then Bezaleel, conscious of the ready spirit of the people in the work, said:

"But it is the faithfulness of the people which has wrought the work. Thou recallest how eagerly they brought of their offerings of gold and silver and brass, and precious stones and cloths and skins and fine linen, and their oil and their spices, and had they not served willingly in the work, we would not be completing it this day."

"True," replied Moses, "and are they glad that the task is almost completed?"

"Yea, as I passed through the camp to-day I heard the people singing and talking together about the Lord, and rejoicing that soon they would have his Tabernacle finished. And to-morrow you will rear it? What news that will be for the people," and Bezaleel turned as though he would go at once to spread the tidings, and then pausing he asked: "And where will you have the materials and furniture for the Tabernacle gathered?"

"At the place of the altar," commanded Moses, as he dismissed them, "and forget not to caution the people that they come not nigh to touch the fittings, for they are holy unto the Lord. The sons of Levi shall minister in these things."

For six months now the work had gone steadily on. The people had entered eagerly into the tasks assigned them by Bezaleel and Aholiab, and under their skillful direction the weaving and dyeing, the cunning work in silver and gold and brass, the carving and shaping of the wood had progressed wonderfully. Everybody had some part in the work, even the children catching the eager spirit of their elders and gladly doing what they could to help.

How swiftly the weeks and months had passed. So occupied with the task in hand had they been that they had no time for murmuring. It hardly seemed possible that they were the same people who had threatened Moses at Rephidim, or had forgotten God and made for themselves the golden calf there at Mount Sinai. Day by day they had received instruction at Moses' hand in the laws and ordinances of God, which he had received while on the mount with God, and while they wrought in the work they vied with each other in seeing how faithfully and well they could perform their tasks.

They had talked together of that day when the Tabernacle should be set up, and God would be served in the way appointed, and it is no wonder that when the tidings came to them that on the morrow they would see the Tabernacle reared, there was very great rejoicing, so that the sound of laughter and singing filled the camp.

The sun that night set upon an expectant people. At the place appointed the rich and costly materials had been brought and the Levites instructed concerning the placing of the same, while the people stood at a distance and watched as long as the daylight lasted, and then as the soft glow of the pillar resting high up on the side of the mountain fell upon the camp, the people turned slowly and went to their tents, saying, softly to themselves:

"To-morrow will the Lord have a dwelling place in our midst."

But how little they realized all that was implied in that saying. How meager was their idea of the meaning of the Tabernacle and its appointed worship. Its richness of material, its varied appointments, the plans for the Tabernacle service all absorbed their attention, and apart from the general consciousness of God, they did not enter deeply into the spirit of the occasion.

But even though the heart understood not, eyes and ears were eager to drink in every detail of the animated scene which began next day with the first rays of light. A reverent hush was upon the people while the work was going on, and no man dared to venture near where the walls of the tabernacle were reared and the tent spread above.

Then Moses took the ark, and in the sight of all the people, he placed therein the tablets of stone on which were written the commandments, and the rod and a pot of the manna. And then he set the staves on the ark and put the mercy seat above the ark, and it was carried within.

"See," whispered the people, one to another, as the Levites bearing the ark disappeared, "see what Moses has done with the rod, and the tablets of stone given to him on the mountain, and the pot of manna."

"Yea," cried Moses, turning towards the people, and noting the solemn hush which had fallen upon them, "yea, it is the testimony of the Lord. Beneath the mercy seat where God will now have his abiding place in the midst of Israel, rest the evidences of God's presence with Israel thus far. The rod through which God worked such mighty deliverance, the pot of manna the evidence of God's miraculous feeding of his people in the midst of the wilderness fastnesses, the tables of stone, the revelation of God's perfect will for the guidance of his people. These tokens of God's dealings with his people rest beneath the mercy seat, even as you, the children of Abraham, are preserved under the mercy seat of God's love."

Again silence fell upon the people as Moses ceased speaking. The Levites have withdrawn, leaving the ark in the holy of holies, and the people stand expectant.

"Moses will now enter and talk with God," they whispered one to the other.

But while they thus spoke, the Cloud, which had stood upon the mountain side, came and covered the Tabernacle, and the glory of the Lord filled the place.

Never before had the people beheld such glory and splendor. The Cloud had always been a thing of wonder by day and splendor of glory by night, but now it glowed and scintillated with a beauty transcendent.

Surely this was the temple of the Lord and he had come down and filled it.

What temple in Egypt had they ever seen which had been so visited by the gods in whose name they had been reared?

When had it ever been that the priests of Egypt could not enter their temples because the glory of their gods had so filled the place?

So thought the people as they stood there, and at last conscious that Moses, instead of entering the place had fallen prostrate upon the ground in worship and adoration of the wonderful manifestation of God's presence, they, too, bowed in reverent worship.

A Sailors' Hospital.

It will be good news to all who are interested in work for sailors that Henry L. Clapp, formerly a resident of New York, will build a hospital on the island of Malta, principally for American sailors in the naval and merchant service. Too little is done for the sailor, who has been called the one "indispensable man" of human society, without whose services the work of civilization and of missions could not go on.—N. Y. Observer.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1907

Buttered Puffed ice.
Omelet.
Salt Rising Bread Toast.

—Luncheon.—
Surprise Salad.
Potatoes au Gratin.
Whole Wheat Bread Sandwiches.
Droppies.
Raspberry-Currant Frappe.

—Dinner.—
Swiss Steak with Gravy.
Creamed Butter Beans.
Cucumber Salad in Boats.
Raspberry "Puds."
Coffee.

Iced Watermelon Hearts—Cut slices of ripe watermelon one-half inch thick. With a heart-shaped cake cutter or a paper pattern and knife cut hearts from the heart of the pieces. Put on ice and thoroughly chill. Serve on individual plates with a bit of crushed ice on melon and a sprig of mint.

Omelet—One egg for each person. Separate yolks and whites. Beat whites to a very stiff froth. Beat yolks twelve times only, add to them two tablespoons of milk or water for each egg and a good pinch of salt. Stir these together thoroughly and fold in whites. Have ready on the stove a heavy skillet in which a scant tablespoonful of butter has browned, turn omelet into this and cook on the top of the stove until nearly done, then place in the oven to brown on top. Turn out on hot plate and serve at once.

Salt Rising Bread—At night take one-half pint of new milk and heat to the boiling point, thicken with fresh cornmeal until about the consistency of mush; set in warm place over night. In the morning take one pint of new milk and one-half pint of boiling water, one tablespoon of sugar and one of salt. Thicken with flour to make a sponge and add the corn meal. Make this sponge in a vessel that can be set in hot water. Keep the same temperature all the time. When it rises to top of pail add one teaspoon of salt and tablespoon each of sugar and lard, one pint of lukewarm milk and flour to make stiff. Kneed well and work into loaves and set in warm place to rise. When light bake one hour. The secret of success in making this bread is keeping it at the same temperature during the different processes of making it. Toast made from this is most delicious.

Droppies—One cup of sugar, half a cup of butter, four beaten eggs, two cups of flour, one teaspoon each of cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg, two teaspoons of baking powder. Drop from a teaspoon into well-greased pans.

Raspberry Currant Frappe—Take one glass of raspberry currant jelly, put over the fire until it dissolves into sirup, then gradually add one quart of warm water. Set away until cold. At luncheon time fill the glasses one-half full of crushed ice and fill up with sirup. A delicious, refreshing drink. It can be made from plum, currant or any tart jelly. (Original.)

Swiss Steak—Have your steak cut one and one-half inches thick. Pound with a sharp knife, then pound in all the flour it will hold and brown in half butter and lard. When well browned on both sides pour in a little boiling water, pepper and salt well and put back where it will simmer for two hours, adding a little boiling water when needed to keep it steaming. Keep closely covered while cooking.

Cucumber Salad in Boats—Three cucumbers five inches long peeled and cut lengthwise. Scrape out inside with a spoon, leaving a thin shell. Soak these shells in ice water for two hours. Pour vinegar over the scraped-out cucumber which has been cut fine and mixed with two teaspoons of chopped onion; let this stand for fifteen minutes and then thoroughly drain. Dice the solid part of one medium-sized tomato and toss together with a little mayonnaise. When time to serve fill boats, which have been wiped dry, with salad mixture and serve on individual plates on a dark nasturtium leaf; garnish with a bright red nasturtium blossom. If the boats are soaked a few minutes in vinegar they are delicious to eat with salad. (Original.)

Raspberry "Pudds"—Two cups of milk, two large tablespoons sugar, yolks of two eggs beaten well, two-thirds of a cup of fine bread crumbs, flavor with lemon or vanilla. Butter five little individual pudding dishes, put a scant tablespoon of raspberry jam in each and pour in the custard. Put dishes in a pan of water and bake in a moderate oven. Make a meringue of whites of eggs and two tablespoons of powdered sugar. Put a twist of meringue on each "pudd" and serve either hot or cold. This is also good when jam is stirred into the custard and baked. (Original.)

A Good Way to Judge a Bank

THE BEST PROOF of the merits of any bank is the length of time that they are allowed to carry large accounts.

If a man has his business or personal account with a bank that does not accord him satisfactory treatment he summarily transfers the account to a bank that will accord him courteous treatment and careful consideration.

Accounts with this bank are seldom closed, because we employ every means to further the interests of its depositors, individually and collectively. We want new business, but never lose sight of the old.

Cigarette Trade of the Country Is Booming.

If the general prosperity of the country were indicated by the constantly increasing consumption of tobacco in the form of cigarettes, then business prospects were never more favorable than at present. There can be no denial of the fact that the cigarette trade is booming. Nearly every little man of 15, with a brain big enough to dream of the day when visible down shall decorate his upper lip, delights in swaggering along the streets with a cigarette in his mouth. How manly the conceited little fellow thinks he is, and how his eyes sparkle with delight at the wondrous feat of ejecting smoke in long lines from his proud nostrils!

The dividing line between boyhood and manhood is surely indicated by the cigarette, says the New York Weekly. In other words, the ambitious lad who can gracefully burn a cigarette, and convert his nostrils into inverted smoke-stacks, should no longer be classed as a boy. No—he is a full-fledged man, or thinks he is, because he possesses the ability to puff away the breath of life in smoke.

This was probably the impression of a lad in Brooklyn, aged 15, who recently died from nicotine poisoning, caused by smoking cigarettes. Every boy who is addicted to the same enervating practice, and fails to take warning from the fate of the youthful smoker to whom we have referred, is not likely to become a very clever or a very strong man. If smoking does not shrink his lungs and frame, and convert him into a sickly ghost before he is 25, he may live long enough to learn that during the years when sensible boys endeavor to become clever and bright, rugged, and strong, and otherwise prepare themselves for the battle of life, he was nothing but a conceited little fool, and ruined his health and dwarfed his intellect by indulging in the senseless habit of smoking cigarettes.

ALCOHOL VS. COFFEE.

Use of the Former as a Beverage Is Harmful.

The habitual use of sedatives—such as alcohol, opium, morphia, chloral, cocaine and their allies—is to be condemned without qualification as false in principle and fatal in result. It is true that these drugs will one and all relieve worry, banish care and procure peace of mind, but it is as true that the worry, the care and the dispeace will return, bringing seven devils with them.

Let us turn now from the sedatives to the stimulents. Must caffeine, as represented by tea and coffee, fall under a like condemnation?

The sedatives we have condemned because they do nothing for the life of the body, but are opposed to it, says Dr. C. W. Saleeby. The stimulant, caffeine, on the other hand, favors the life of the body, promotes the process of combustion on which life depends, increases vitality and that power to work which is the expression of vitality.

Everywhere men find that a cup of tea or coffee is refreshing; it produces renewed vigor, it heightens the sense of organic well-being, the consciousness of fitness and capacity. This is utterly distinct from the action of alcohol or opium in deadening the sense of ill-being.

Tea and coffee have had many hard words said of them. The trouble is that people will not distinguish. Tea, for instance, as commonly understood in this country, is more nearly a decoction than an infusion of the tea leaf, and contains besides the theine or caffeine a very large proportion of tannin or tanic acid.

Drink the Cause of It.

Dr. Wilhite, superintendent of the asylum at Dunning, Ill., told a woman's club that of the 1,000 insane patients, 600 men and 400 women, alcohol was the cause of insanity in the cases of 10½ per cent. of the men and five per cent. of the women. Of 1,000 pauper cases, 800 men and 200 women, 95 per cent. of the men and 59 per cent. of the women have an "alcoholic history," and 44 per cent. and 22 per cent. of the men and women, respectively, of this class drink to excess. Of 1,000 tuberculosis patients, 800 men and 200 women, 94 per cent. and 23 per cent., respectively, have an "alcoholic history."

Must Not Drink.

The Lehigh Valley railroad has served notice on its employes that they must be total abstainers from alcoholic drinks or leave the service of the company, and it is quite likely that all of the other lines in the United States will adopt the same rule. It is only cumulative evidence that there are enough sober men in the world to do the world's work. The conviction is gaining weight everywhere that the temperance question is not simply moral, but economic, and corporations are now one with the churches in the effort to suppress this great national vice.

Crazy, Surely.

A Chicago judge ruled a man insane because it was shown that he drank 55 drinks of whisky a day. He was certainly crazy to get whisky.

SURPLUS WEALTH

Text—Luke 12:17: "What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits.

A Sermon by Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage, D. D.

(From the Christian Herald.)

The chief character of my text is an old miser. He is just like thousands of men and women we see in daily life, or read about in newspapers. He was evidently one of the agricultural leaders of the east. Perhaps he started as a poor boy. He may have been one of the immigrants who came to Jerusalem during Herod's administration. He may have been born in Italy, and have gone to Syria to seek his fortune. In this far-off province of the east, he hires himself out as a farm hand. He saves his wages and works hard. But he has a keen mind as well as a willing hand. He buys a little farm. There is a period of prosperity. The crops grow larger and larger. He begins to have money to invest, and he places mortgages upon his neighbors' farms and mercilessly forecloses them. His landed estate widens. He is one of those fortunate, or unfortunate, beings who, having an absorbing passion for gold, find everything turn to gold that they touch. He builds great granaries and they are always full. His sheep and cattle are browsing everywhere. His horses are the finest. His soil is the richest. Though he has many barns, the increasing crop is so great that he does not know what to do with it. He has more than he can use. In fact, he is embarrassed with the abundance of his riches. "What shall I do with all this crop?" he asks himself. "I must build larger barns. Then I will store away so much that I will never have to work any more, and just live to enjoy my wealth." Let me read you the story: "And he said, This will I do: I will pull down my barns and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods." Though he had more than he could use, he still kept gathering in. He doubtless thought himself a most successful man, and his neighbors, if they were such people as live in our times, envied him and looked up to him with reverence. But Christ tells us that there was another opinion of his life and character, and that, too, by One who held life and death in his hands. God said he was a fool.

Now, it is a terrible thing for God to say that of any one, for his judgment is true. None of us would like him to say that of us. Then we must be careful and avoid these faults, for God judges now by the same standard as he did in the times of this rich farmer. Now, as his fault related to his surplus wealth, it is an appropriate subject for consideration on this Sunday preceding Labor day.

I would say to a successful man, "You know you are in affluence. You know you have more than you can eat up, or wear out. You know that you are hoarding up more money than will ever be good for your children to inherit. If you are a wise father, you will compel them to work for their living as you worked for yours. It will be better for you, instead of developing your penuriousness, to learn the gospel law of giving and of helping. And today I want to tell you whom you ought to help with your surplus wealth.

First, when you begin to prosper in life, you should be willing to aid those who have been directly or indirectly the means of making it possible for you to achieve the success which is yours. You should extend the hand of gratitude to those who helped develop you in your babyhood and boyhood and youth and manhood. You should think of your father and mother in the old homestead, of your old teachers and of your old employers. They have a claim on you, for they devoted their lives to your interest; and you should now recognize the obligation to help such of them as need your help.

Then, too, there are your employes. No man ever wins his success alone. I always like to compare life to a great battle. A general has a campaign to fight; what does he do? Does he take a gun or a sword and go forth and fight that battle single-handed? No; he first collects an army made up of many soldiers. Then he organizes those soldiers and drills them. He drafts those soldiers from the best homes all over the land. He gathers them from the stores and the factories. Then he sets his army in motion, and hurls it against the flanks of the enemy, and the lines are broken and the battle is won. Now, what would you think of a general who would come home from a war and say, "I did it all. The credit is all mine." Would you not consider such a man a selfish man, and an ingrate? Where were the staff officers and the right-hand men of that general? Where were the soldiers who did the weary sentinel duty and stormed the breastworks and risked their lives to make his victory possible? Are not the soldiers to have any part in the triumph and in the rewards of the nation?

Ah, no. The true general and the soldiers of his army are one. When his soldiers are defeated, he shares the blame. And sometimes a general will take upon himself all the discredit of the defeat. Thus Robert E. Lee, after the battle of Gettysburg, said, "It was my fault. It was all my fault." And General Burnside, after the battle of Fredericksburg, said, "It was my fault. It was all my fault." And one of the last acts of brave Carl Schurz's life was to write a defense of his own "Eleventh corps," which was defeated by Stonewall Jackson at Chancellorsville; while, on the other hand, one of the first acts of Sherman, or Lee, or Jackson, or Grant, or Wellington, or Napoleon, after a victory was to announce a long list of promotions for the men who had specially distinguished themselves in the fight, and for the soldiers whose sacrifices had made the victory possible. "My soldiers did it," is always the cry of the true successful general. "My soldiers! Praise me not any more than you praise the men who fight under me. If you reward me, then reward my soldiers, too."

Now, should you not act on the same principle? Have there been no other hands besides yours building your "Palace of Success?" What about your father and mother and brothers and sisters, and the teachers and friends of your youth? Have they had nothing to do with moulding your character and developing your talents? Did not your parents give up the best part of their lives to your interests? Did not your sisters and brothers make sacrifices for your education? What about the little old village church where you used to be taken as a boy and where, to a great extent, your spiritual character was formed? Have you ever done anything for that church? Have you helped to pay off its mortgage? Have you bought a new organ for that church? Have you ever sent a dollar to help support the poor widow for your spiritual health? How about your old school teachers? Have you done anything for them? No. You stick your thumbs in the lapel of your coat and pat your chest approvingly, and contentedly say, "I am

A Self-made Man

These people had nothing whatever to do with my present success. I won it all. Yes, I won it all." I know from your words that your ungrateful heart has turned into stone, and that it will need a blast of dynamite to break it from its present ingratitude and forgetfulness.

Then what about your present staff of employes? Are they to receive no financial share of your present success? You know you have men working for you today who are simply invaluable. You know that if a rival firm should come and offer certain men in your employ a third more than they are receiving, you would be glad to advance their wages rather than lose them. You know that if hard times should come and business should run behind, you would cut your employes' wages down. And yet, when your business is prospering, you give those employes no share in the prosperity. Now, my brother, I want to ask you, is that square? Is that right? If you ask those men with whom you are associated to share your adversity when it comes, ought you not to let these same faithful men and women share your prosperity?

But there is another large class of people who need your help today, and who have a right to claim it. They are not the old men and women, nor the middle-aged. They are not the people who for years have been living by your side They are not the people with whom perhaps you are even acquainted. But they are the boys and the girls, or the young folks who are standing upon the threshold of life, with some fearful mental, or physical, or spiritual handicap. These young people have on them the taint of a bad ancestral heritage. Or, by financial misfortune, they are compelled to grow up amid vitiating social environments. Unless some one comes to their help, they are doomed to make a failure out of life before they start. God expects you to help them.

Here, for instance, is a young boy who has a large number of brothers and sisters. He is born in the beautiful city of Philadelphia. But thousands and hundreds of thousands of families are there and he is only an atom in a great crowd. His father is a hard-working, brave, noble man. But one day, a scaffolding upon which he is working drops, and almost immediately the husband and father is dead. His mangled corpse is carried home to the little cottage.

How is that boy ten years of age to get an education? Who is to feed him and to educate him and to clothe him? The mother? Well, if the mother is to be the bread-winner, who will stay at home and look after the children? Can a weak mother do a man's work and a woman's work at the same time? Is it possible for her to be in two places at the same time? Unless some one comes to this woman's help that boy will have no chance for success. He will be sent forth to help earn his living almost before he is out of the nursery. He may become a newsboy. He may be pitilessly thrown among the vile influences of a street gutter. Then his moral character, in all probability, will be wrecked while he is yet only a little child. Who will be the Stephen Girard to reach out the helping hand of rescue to that child?

Have you ever visited Girard college in Philadelphia? It is one of the noblest institutions in the world. It was founded by an old miser. Stephen Girard during his lifetime was a shylock who always demanded his full pound of flesh from his victims. In his financial dealings he seemed to be as merciless as an Ebenezer Scrooge, or a wrinkled-up, shriveled-hearted Marley. But, though Stephen Girard was mercenary, he was no fool. He knew that he could not take his gold across the River Styx. So, as he began to grow old and came nearer and nearer to the end of life, he said to himself, "I must leave this money behind when I die I will leave it to the people to whom it can do the most good." Then he asked himself this question: "Who are the people most in need of help? Why, they are the children who have no fathers to help them along and to give them the right kind of a start." So Stephen Girard lumped all his fortune together. He left it to a board of trustees to establish an institution in which the fatherless boys of Pennsylvania could be clothed, and fed, and educated until they were able to take care of themselves. Could he have done a grander work with his money? Tell me, with so many helpless young people about, cannot you do something to help those young folks by your side?

But though all people should try and help the helpless young folks, this plea ought to come especially home to those who have never been blessed with children. God pity the man or the woman into whose heart there has never come a little child to love and to develop. No human life is complete without a child. My friend, if you have not a child, bone of your bone, and flesh of your flesh, to love and nurture, then for your own good, as well as for the good of some helpless children, I beg and plead with you to adopt one. Do not be afraid that an adopted child, on account of its unfortunate parents, may turn out badly. Dr. T. J. Barnardo, the greatest authority on children of the slums that ever lived, and the one man who saved more children to God and to worldly usefulness and respectability than other men, gave this as his testimony: "I am strongly of the opinion that there is no inherent tendency in any boy or girl, no matter how descended, or how surrounded, which may not be eradicated, or at least subjugated, under favorable conditions. In the fierce contest between heredity and environment, I firmly believe that, all other things being equal, environment is the more potent. No one is hopelessly handicapped by his birth conditions." In other words, with so many children in our foundling asylums who need your help, are you going to turn your back upon them and keep on growing more selfish and mean as you are aging? For God's sake, for your own sake, as well as for the children's sake, adopt a child just as soon as you can. God never meant you to live without the loving influence of some little child in your home. Take some child to your heart and throw your protecting arms about it.

We are to help those standing upon the threshold of life. We must do more than that; we are to extend financial aid and spiritual help to those who seem to have made a complete failure of life. We should extend the helping hand to those whose sins and errors have flung them down, and to those who have lost faith in themselves, and to those whom the world has cast aside as useless and of no account. Now, my friends, I want to tell you that no man has ever fallen so low in sin but there is yet some good in him. If we only go about it the right way, we can win that man back to the paths of truth and right. Don't growl a man into being bad, as you may easily do, but love a man into being good.

Lastly, we should help those who have lived their lives and are now in the Indian summer of their earthly existence, as well as the middle-aged who have erred, and those who are young. We should help the aged and cripples and the chronic invalids and those whose lives will always be dependent upon others. You are to do this not only for those who are your kith and kin, but also for those who have no direct claim upon your benefaction.

Now, why should you not help the maimed and the halt and the deaf and the dumb and the blind? Are you going to save your money and leave it to your able-bodied children, so that they can lie around in ease and do nothing? Do you not realize that every dollar you give to your children, after you have given them a good education, in all probability will lessen their mental and physical vitality? If you want your boys and girls to be strong and brave and self-reliant, then you must teach them to labor as you have labored. Are you going to turn your backs upon God's helpless sick and aged, and give your all to your children, so that they shall become weak and helpless? Just run over for me the list of the sons of wealthy men of your youth. How have they turned out, handicapped with their father's wealth? Would you like your children to become as those sons of wealthy men are? Are you going to take this necessity of a struggle away from your boys and girls? Are you going to unman your children, and take from them the very discipline and struggle which have helped to make you what you are? Then, if you are not going to squander your money upon your able-bodied children, will you not spend it where it is so much needed, in helping along the "Old Folks' Homes," in endowing hospital beds for the sick, and in helping to alleviate the sufferings of those who are dependent upon human medicament ?

And I plead with you thus to scatter your money for another reason. When you begin to give your money to the lame, the halt, the blind and the aged, the time will not be far distant when you will gladly give your own personal strength to the care of the unfortunate, as well as your money. It is almost an impossibility for a man continually to give his money to the unfortunates of life, unless at the same time he gives himself to the service. When he gives his money to help unfortunate ones, the time will not be far distant when that man, as one of Christ's disciples, will be working in God's vineyard with his own hands and feet.

If you are going to make anything out of your life in reference to happiness, it is about time for you to commence to work for God's unfortunate ones. You know as well as I know, that the selfish life does not pay. You know that a long succession of dances and parties does not bring to you the peace that was enjoyed by your Christian mother and father, who spent most of their lives in helping God's needy. Will you, O man, stop storing up your harvests in your granaries? Will you not rather scatter them abroad for suffering mankind? Will you not give your life for others, and in seeking their joys find your own rich blessing? May God teach us to give to others, until at last we surrender all for God's glory and man's happiness.

Give! as the light that flows out of heaven,
Give! as the waves when their channel is riven;
Give! as the free air and sunshine are given.
Lavishly, utterly, joyfully given.
Not the waste drops of thy cup overflowing,
Not the faint sparks of thy hearth ever glowing,
Not a pale bud from the June rose blowing,
Give as He gave thee, who gave thee to give.

God In The Heart and The Home

Moses Pleading With Israel.

International Sunday School Lesson for Sunday Sept. 15. by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts.

Lesson Text—Deut. 1-15. Golden Text—Deut. 6:12: "Beware lest thou forget the Lord."

(From the Christian Herald.)

Nearing the close of his life, Moses has something to say to the people of whom he has been the leader for forty years, and so he is delivering to them what has been called "a magnificent series of orations." Imagine the Israelites gathered upon the great plain, four or five miles wide, which lies between the mountains of Moab and the River Jordan, with the city of Jericho in the background. A low spur of the mountain may have been the rostrum from which Moses spoke, or a wooden structure in the midst of the people may have been constructed.

The Leader's Farewell

Moses is about one hundred and twenty years old, and yet there is about him none of the weakness of old age. Instead he is strong and stalwart, for his "natural force" has been preserved by the Lord for the accomplishment of his great task. His eyes are keen and far-seeing, undimmed by age, as he glances over the whole assembly with gleams of tender and personal interest. The people, in turn, look upon him with reverent attention, because of all he has been to them, and knowing that they are soon to see him no more They hang upon his every word.

Their interest deepens as he talks to them about how they shall serve God in their family life. Each member of the family must love God with all his soul and strength, and he must also have the Word of God in mind and heart. The family religion must be something individual as well as collective. None must be considered too young to share in it. The youngest children must be taught the laws of God, even those who cannot be taught in words, but only by signs of reverence, as the parents point with bowed heads to the name of Jehovah on the small roll containing Deut. 6: 4, 9, 11, 13-21, which they fastened to the door-posts of their houses, called the mezuzah.

And Moses talks with them about how God's laws, and the keeping of them, is to be a frequent subject of talk in their homes, the theme of conversation at all times, even when they are out walking together. And thus it should be that they would not forget the Lord their God, who had brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, and they should be established in his worship, and not liable to be led astray into the worship of the false gods of the people they would find in the land God had promised to give them.

Love the Basis of Law

This was not all Moses had to say, for day after day the people gathered together to hear his farewell discourses, in which he epitomized all the way the Lord had led them, and instructed them from their going out of Egypt until they had come to the very border of the Promised Land.

The two great truths of this lesson are that (1) Love in God is the root of law and (2) Love in us to God and man is the root of free obedience.

"These are the commandments, the statutes, and the judgments, which the Lord your God commanded to teach you, that ye might do them that it may be well with thee." This refers to the Book of Deuteronomy, made up of the farewell addresses of Moses, in which he repeated and explained a second time the laws he had received from God in Mount Sinai. A single leaf of this book Jesus used three times as a shield to "quench the fiery darts of the adversary" when he was tempted in the wilderness (8: 3; 6: 16; 6: 13). Those verses he had no doubt put in the armory of his memory when a child in Nazareth, to have them ready against the day of need. This book is full of such divine weapons of defense and attack, and should be not only read and studied, but memorized.

Wonderful Memories

This lesson is written in a missionary school for girls in Canton, China, where many of the Chinese girls can repeat the entire New Testament. In childhood and youth not only Scripture verses but hymns should be learned every week, at least one text and one stanza every day, not only to ward off temptation, but for use in helping others in our own homes and elsewhere. We do not always have our Bibles at hand when we need texts. We should "learn them by heart" in the deepest sense of that phrase, and be ready to draw them warm from our hearts for another's need at a moment's notice.

It is "well with thee" to have God's Word in memory, in heart, in life, not alone spiritually but temporally. "That thy days may be prolonged," suggests not only the "eternal life," which whosoever believeth hath even now in its beginnings, but also the longer life in this world which the insurance statistics show is the usual reward of a clean, sober life. Insurance tables re-echo the divine warning that "the wicked shall not live out half their days." Although the sedentary lives of preachers would naturally make them shorter lived than others more active and more out of doors, they rank higher than other insurance risks—even missionaries in tropical countries, where sanitary science is unknown — manifestly because their purer habits more than offset those other unhygienic conditions. Those who restrain passions and appetites, who refuse to weaken and shorten life by the use of narcotics and intoxicants and uncleanness, illustrate the saying that needs to be often repeated, "Self-denial is self-love living for the future." Christian men and women as a rule live longer and stronger and happier lives than others—"all this and heaven too."

Pure Monotheism

"The Lord our God is one Lord." This truth, which had to be so often repeated to the Israelites, who, even while God was leading them by a visible pillar of fire and feeding them with daily manna, relapsed into the worship of the Egyptian calf god, is still needed in the twentieth century. Right beside steamboats, railroads and telephones, we have just seen men and women in China burn incense sticks to a dead emperor and to "five hundred genii" about him, which an ingenious moulder has studied to vary, each from every other, in some feature of face or position of hand. The many "saints" of the Roman Catholics are also to the ignorant so many gods. When we were in the Philippines recently, there was a contest among the Roman Catholics whether they should change the patron saint of the islands for another saint, "Mary Anti-polo," whose image, stolen by a German pirate from Mexico long ago and brought by him to Manila, has seemed to be popular. The proposal was defeated, and the same old patron saint holds the place. The rival image, however, was visited daily through the month of May by trainloads of people at its suburban shrine, whence it was last year brought into Manila in triumphal procession.

Idolatry Hideous.

Let none think that idolatry is a wrong only to God. All other sorrows of this world, sorrows by disease, loss, injustice, bereavement, are outweighed by the vain lessons that more than half the world suffers from superstition, that which infests the air with devils or devlish gods bent on hurting, rather than helping, mankind. Those who visit heathen lands with their hearts as well as eyes wide open, see in the temples, however beautiful their architecture, the hideousness of religions that substitute fear for faith, whose worshipers are never known to smile. Not alone to help the heathen to heaven do we need to redouble our missionary endeavors, but to save them from the present miseries of their daily life.

"The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which is lost." Think of a poor family, all living in one room on scanty food, with scantier clothing, paying thirty dollars, one hundred days' wages, probably all their savings, to Buddhist priests, to mutter incantations and beat tomtoms for one night, for the cure of a sick child, on the theory that the sickness was due to evil spirits lingering about their unsanitary home! As morning approached, one of the priests walked away, lantern in hand, to guide the exorcised devils into a foreigner's compound near by, one of many such harmless invasions of his premises on a like errand. The foreigner was a medical missionary, from whom we have just heard the story, and whose skilful and free services had been declined in favor of these priestly frauds, whom some sentimental Americans suppose are sincere and devout "seekers after God." We have visited scores of heathen temples and have searched the faces of the priests for one ray of aspiration. Appetite, lust and greed are the trinity whose marks are on their faces. And the dull faces of the worshipers in those temples make stronger appeal to thoughtful men than the blind eyes and maimed bodies of the most abject beggars. "Give alms of the things that are within."

The Law in the Heart.

"These words which I command thee this day shall be in thy heart." The law coming from God's heart was to be received in man's heart. A father's love makes laws or rules to save his child from sorrow. It is easy to show a child that love makes law in the home, and that he should therefore love the law thus made, and the law-giver. It ought therefore to be easy to teach a child also that the laws of the heavenly Father are made of love; that love and law are but root and fruit. Thou shalt love God, thou shalt love man—on these two loves hangs all law. Such teaching should enable a child to understand how the unknown singer of the longest song in the bible, the 119th Psalm, could say in many variations,

Oh, how love I thy law!
It is my meditation all the day.

Such teaching should show that love is the root of obedience to law in us. George Macdonald says, in words that should be stored in memory: "When God's will is our law, then are we but a kind of noble slaves; but when God's will is our will, then are we his free children." Five times over in his last words, Jesus said, "If a man love me he will keep my words." (John 15.) From the root of love to God and man grows the tree whose sap is Christian life, whose branches are the service of man, whose topmost fruit is liberty. Christian life is perfected only when we love what God loves, and hate what God hates, so that what we permit ourselves is what God permits, and what we forbid ourselves is what God forbids. That alone is true liberty, the liberty with which Christ makes us free, the "keys" of liberty, given not to Peter alone, not to apostles only, but to all who really receive Christ in their hearts.

A Wife's Delicacy.

Love is more than knowledge, more than words, more than action, and will produce them all. We may lack in judgment, but loving service will be accepted in spite of our mistakes. A man in New York who was supremely devoted to his wife, saw in a store window a dress pattern that he thought would delight his wife, but found it would cost more than he could afford. At last, however, he determined to make a great sacrifice for her sake, and so bought it and brought it to her. It was the color she most abominated and was least suitable, but she knew the loyal love that prompted it, and received it with thanks and no sign of displeasure, trusting to find some way to save him from disappointment.

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart." We can obey that command or God would not have given it; and that command means perfect love — not perfect judgment; that is, the command means that among mixed motives the dominant motive should be and may be to please God and do his will.

"Thou shalt teach them diligently to thy children." Many a man may seem to be unmoved by any pleas directed to him personally to open his heart to the workings of the Divine Spirit and begin the consecrated life of the Christian, but ask him what he wants for his children, and a different chord will be struck. He will usually reply that he does not want his children to follow his example. And one of the most effective ways of getting such a man into the kingdom has proved to be an appeal "for the sake of the children."

SAMMY'S HAIRBREADTH ESCAPE FROM THE INDIANS.

BY WILLIAM WALLACE, JR.

A great many years ago when the states lying west of the Mississippi River were still in a very wild, uncivilized state, there were many venturesome men who took their families into the new country to find homes. They remained as close to the outer line of civilization as was possible, but that did not make them secure from danger, for to the westward were roving Indian tribes that occasionally went on the war-path, raiding the frontier settlements and often massacring the entire population, even to the children and infants.

Among the early settlers of Central Kansas there was a family by the name of Green. Their only child, a little boy of ten, was named Samuel—Sammy for short. Their home was a rude log cabin on the bank of a very pretty and well-wooded river, and much of the time was spent by Sammy and his mother fishing. Their table was supplied by game and fish, the only meat the settlers had except for an occasional side of bacon brought from the "trading post" (a small town of a few dozen houses situated on the old Santa Fe trail).

And so the summer days passed, Sammy and his mother fishing, working the garden, and picking wild grapes and gooseberries, while Sammy's father worked in the fields, preparing provender for the family and the horses and cow for the coming winter. And throughout the entire spring, summer, and first fall month, there was not the sign of an Indian. Indeed, the settlers now supposed themselves safe from the red men, for the government had taken a strong stand in regard to the Indian, his territory and his annuity, and amicable relations were supposed to exist between the pale-face and his red brother.

One day late in September Mr. Green decided to go to the "trading post" for some necessary farming implements. As the town was some distance away he could not possibly return before evening. He made an early start, being well on the way before the sun was up. Sammy and his mother got through with their small household duties, picketed the cow in fresh grass, placing a trough of water near her; gave feed and water to the chickens and pigs for the day, dressed themselves in their Sunday best and started for a neighbor's farm some three miles distant. It was their intention to visit there for the day, Mr. Green coming for them with the wagon as soon as he should return home.

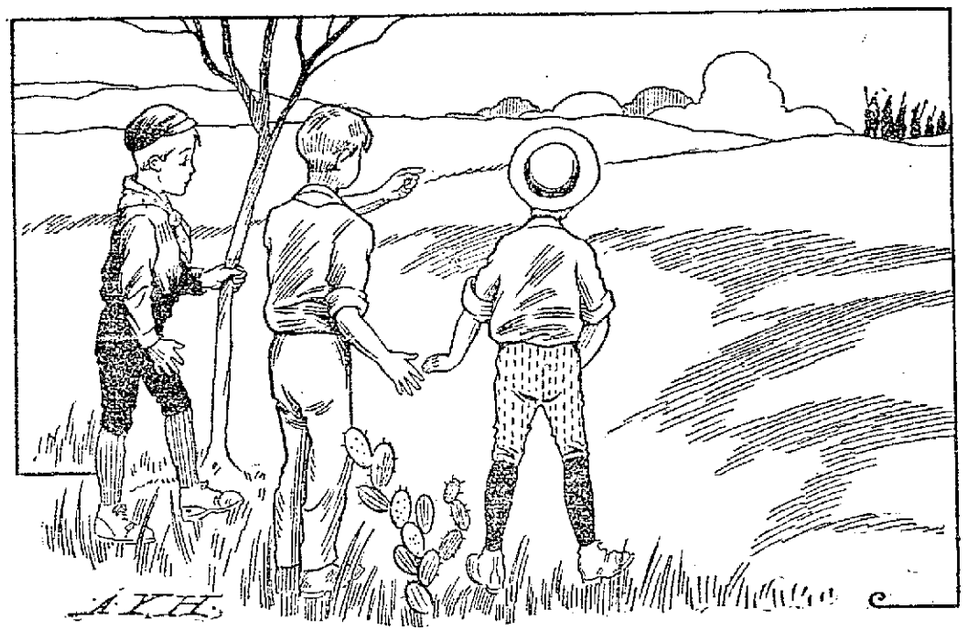
The forenoon passed pleasantly enough, Mrs. Green and the neighbor talking while they sewed and the boys playing "Indian" in the yard. But they found the confines of the yard too small for their exciting game and wandered off toward the river, which was about half a mile distant.

They had played for some time when suddenly George Friends, one of Sammy's young hosts, stopped in the midst of the game, and shading his eyes with his hands, looked towards the West. "As sure as I'm a foot high," he exclaimed, "there are Indians! See 'em coming over that rise yonder? And I do believe they've got war paint on, too."

Sammy and Fred, the latter being George's brother, looked in the direction of George's pointing finger. And there, sure enough, coming over a slight rise of ground were a dozen or more Indians, riding single file. But at that distance it was quite impossible to ascertain about their paint. George had a vivid imagination and fancied he could see the signs of war on the faces and half-naked bodies of the red men even at a distance.

"We must run for our lives!" cried George. "We've got to go like greased lightning, too, for if they see us they'll whip up their ponies and come like a prairie-fire."

There was nothing more said, George making the start for home with Sammy and Fred following. They ran, half-bent, through the rank grass and tall sunflowers, holding their forms low that the grass and flowers might hide them from the view of the Indians. But the Indian's eye is a mightily trained one, and it is said he can see a ground squirrel running through the grass a mile away.



And there, sure enough, coming over a slight rise of ground were a dozen or more Indians.

However true or untrue this assertion may be it is a fact that no human being—of any size—can hide himself from the keen and watchful eye of a red man unless he be covered by something more than prairie grass and sunflowers. So it was that the three boys had scarcely gone a dozen steps, dodging from clump to clump of sunflowers, and half-crawling in the grass, when the eyes of the Indians caught them.

And the boys, now thoroughly frightened, saw that they had been discovered. "What can we do?" hoarsely whispered Sammy, lying flat on his belly and beginning to crawl towards a bunch of protecting sunflowers.

"Git for the house as fast as we can," answered George. "We've been seen, so there's no use wasting precious time trying to hide ourselves. Come, let's run as fast as we can right in the open."

Sammy, to his horror, saw George straighten up and start afresh towards the house, and Fred followed his example. But not so with Sammy. He could see that the Indians were urging their ponies to swifter speed and were making a direct line towards the boys, aiming to cut in between them and the house. Sammy remained on his belly, crawling from bunch to bunch of sunflowers, but instead of going after his fleeing comrades he wended his way towards the river about an eighth of a mile distant. His one thought now was to hide inside a little cave that led into a ledge of rock which overhung one bank of the river. The place was not far away and he felt that he could reach there and be secure, for the Indians would turn their attention to his running comrades and doubtless forget that there had been a third boy. But in the event of their remembering him, and trying to pursue him, they would just search about in the weeds and grass, never thinking to look for him down about the river.

Sammy succeeded in reaching the ledge of rock, but before creeping into the cave—which had always been a source of mystery and menace to him till now—he turned about and peered through the underbrush that skirted the river bank. He could see the house of the Friends very plainly, and knew that his mother and Mrs. Friends had seen the approaching Indians, for the door and the windows on the side of the house that he could see were closed. And pretty soon he caught a glimpse of his own mother—he knew her by the color of her dress—running out to meet George and Fred, doubtless wondering what had become of her own little son. He saw her stop to speak to the boys, then on she came towards the sunflowers where George had evidently told her Sammy was hiding. George and Fred went on homeward, but the Indians were gaining on them and threatened to cut them off from safety.

Seeing his poor distracted mother running right into danger brought Sammy to his senses, and he quickly came out to a point where she might see him. With a loud whistle he called her attention to his location, and waved his arm for her to go back to the house. But this the mother did not do. She came on and on towards the spot where her precious boy was hiding, although she must have known that she would be overtaken within a few minutes—even before she could reach him—by the rapidly-riding Indians. George and Fred in some miraculous way, reached their house and Sammy could see the door open to receive them after which it closed quickly.

So now there was Sammy's poor mother alone exposed to the real danger, for Sammy was so near to the cave that he could slip from sight instantly and crawl back around the cave's curve and be safe from prying eyes. And George and Fred were safe within four walls with their mother who had a good shot gun which she knew how to use if called upon to do so to protect her children, herself and her home.

Sammy now regretted from the very depths of his heart that he had not gone on with his companions, for he could out-run Fred any time; therefore, he must have gained the house and safety and have prevented his dear mother running such risks as she was now doing for his sake.

The Indians did just what Sammy feared they would do: they came rushing up to his mother and surrounded her. She paused and looked from one red-skin to another, making imploring gestures with hands and eyes. Then, turning her face towards Sammy—but not looking in his direction, she called out: "Hide yourself, Sammy, in the cave. Make no outcry. If I'm carried off help father to follow after me. But run into no danger yourself." Of course the Indians did not know that the poor woman was speaking to her little son some two hundred yards distant. They supposed she was making some plea for mercy. One of the Indians rode round and round her, making some talk with the others who stood still. Then stooping down he pointed towards a bright-colored ribbon she wore in a bow at her throat. Quickly the anxious woman tore it off and presented it to the Indian, who evidently was a chief. He took the bit of color and fastened it to his head dress which was composed of wild birds' feathers. Then, seeming well pleased with his new adornment he opened his mouth and pointed down his throat, afterward turning his eyes on the farm house and making a motion of drinking. Sammy's mother nodded her head and spoke a few words in an Indian tongue which meant: "Come, friends, you shall have to eat and drink." It proved that the words she spoke belonged to these Indians' language, for the leader replied to her, though she could not quite understand what he said, only knowing the meaning of a few words that he spoke. But the Indians drew their horses apart and motioned her to go to the house, they accompanying her. At the door she was let in and immediately the door was closed in the Indians' faces. But from the window she, in company with Mrs. Friends, handed out milk and bread and other food, such as they had on hand. The Indians ate and drank greedily, after which they signified their desire to enter the house. But Mrs. Green and her hostess quickly barred the small window, motioning to the Indians as they did so to depart. But the red-skins doubtless wanted to frighten the lonely women and dismounted and tried to break down the door. And then it was that the shot gun, in Mrs. Friends' hands, was brought into use. Pushing a small chink from between the logs of the walls she thrust out the muzzle of the gun and fired. She did not aim at an Indian, not wishing to wound one, for in that case a terrible onslaught from outside might be expected. She merely fired into open space to let the enemy know that firearms were in the house and people there who knew how to use them.

Well, the report of that gun was sufficient. The way those Indians rode away from that farm house was a sight. But to Sammy's dismay they came straight to the river and stopped not twenty feet from his cave. In fact, one Indian dismounted and came right to the cave's entrance, jabbering in his strange tongue as he thrust his head inside to look about. Sammy, round a little curve in the cave, and lying prone on his face, held his breath. He was cold with fear, for he was afraid that his feet might still be in sight. But after a few minutes he had the satisfaction of hearing the savage band ride away, fording the river at a point a little above where he lay. Then he could hear them going on southward, and knew they must be bound for the Indian Territory. But though Sammy knew the Indians were now far away and could not see him should he come from his hiding place, he was so frightened that he remained in the black, close little cave till a dearly-loved voice called at the entrance: "Come out, darling. It's only mother!" And then, stiffened in every joint, Sammy crept, feet foremost, from his hiding place.

"That's what I call a hairbreadth escape," he panted to his mother as she kissed him greedily.

"And now we'll go to the house and enjoy the good dinner Mrs. Friends is preparing for us," said Mrs. Green. "I fancy we'll all eat with a good appetite, now that the excitement and danger are passed."

"I'll not eat with an appetite till papa comes with his gun," said Sammy. "But, by cracky, mama, it's too bad you had to give that old Indian your pretty ribbon bow. We'll have to get you another one when we go to the trading post."

Naughty Little Silly.

Little Silly plays in school,
And never learns a lesson.
She whispers, too, against the rule.
Oh, it is most distressin'!

At home she pouts and stubborn is:
And her mother she annoys.
Not one thing does she do to please,
She spoils and breaks her toys.

She cries for sweet cake every day;
And frowns on bread and milk.
She says she hates her cotton frocks,
And wishes they were silk.

Oh, she is a most trying child!
As naughty as can be.
'Tis hoped the girls who read this tale
Are not so bad as she.

Sammy Tankee.

He was a queer little Chin-ee.
He wore a long cueue down his back.
His name was Sammy Tan-kee;
And his shirt hung loose like a sack.

His papa did wash-ee wash,
All day at a very big tub.
The suds would splutter and foam,
As the elder Tan-kee would rub-rub.

And little Tan-kee said each day;
"I shall grow up as fast as I can,
And soon be big like pa-pa,
And become a rich wash-ee-wash man."

A small black bear
Met a small black boy.
They both oped their eyes in fear.
They both turned & ran
As fast as they could
Each saying, "I've
No business here!"

A NORTH AMERICAN KING

Over three hundred years ago one of the many kings of the North American continent ruled over that part of the country now known as California. His name—given to him by the Englishmen who found him there—was Hioh. Now, a great many would call Hioh a Chief, but in the land where he reigned he was indeed a king, as were all the other great chiefs of the numerous Indian tribes.

When Sir Francis Drake landed in California he found there a very friendly tribe of red men governed by Hioh. So pleased were these simple people with the coming of Drake and his men that they gave over their beautiful land to them. They thought the blue-eyed and fair-skinned men to be gods from the other world, the world that they called the "Happy Hunting Ground."

But after a few weeks visit in this strange land Drake and his men sailed away to hear the tidings of their great discovery to Queen Elizabeth in England. And the red men were left to mourn for the gods whom they had hoped would remain with them forever and govern them and heal all their sick, as only gods could do.

And Hioh, that trusting, friendly king, or chief, did not live to see his people conquered by a heartless white race that seemed to forget that this great country belonged to the red men. He doubtless thought that the gods who had so honored him by their presence for a few weeks were too good to exist on common soil, and had therefore betaken themselves again to that mystic realm somewhere in the clouds.

How Pussy Earned Her Board and Keep.

BY HELENA DAVIS.

One morning in the early spring Frankie and May found a wee grey kitten in the road as they were on their way to school. Frankie took the poor mewing little waif in his arms and stroked its silky fur, saying: "Now, little Miss Puss, what shall we do with you? It is almost school time and we cannot return home with you, for in that case we should be late to school, and that would never do. And it is out of the question to take you to school, for Teacher would not permit you in the room: it would make the pupils laugh, you know. So, what are we to do with you? We certainly aren't going to leave you in the road to die or be run over by some wagon."

The little kitten listened to Frankie's reasoning and seemed to understand that he did not know how to solve the problem of disposing of it; but all it said in its own forlorn behalf was, "Mew, mew, m-e-w-w!" But the manner of its saying "mew" was quite enough to touch the heart of anyone; and Frankie's and May's hearts were very easily touched, too. So Frankie said to his sister:

"S'pose we drop by old Miss Clark's house and ask her to keep this little tramp till we come along from school in the afternoon."

"A good idea," acquiesced May. "And you'd better let me carry the little dear, for girls know so much more about kittens and babies and dolls than boys do."

Frankie reluctantly delivered Miss Puss into the arms of his sister, and they hastened on their way, soon dropping out of the big road into a lane which led to the home of a quaint old maiden lady by the name of Miss Clark. The old lady was on the porch of her pretty farm house when the children came up, and it was not long till the kitten had changed hands, Miss Clark kindly agreeing to keep it and feed it during the day.

That evening when Frankie and May stopped at Miss Clark's for their new possession—the stray kitten—they found it sound asleep on a mat in the sun, so full of good rich milk that it could hardly move itself. "It's a fine cat," declared Miss Clark, smiling on the little grey ball as it slept. "It's been a bit gluttonous, I'll admit, but circumstances almost forced that. You see, a kitten so small as this one must have something to eat very often, and evidently it has been without food during the whole night, and in that starved condition it over-ate. But it is young yet, and must learn manners later. It will grow up to be a great help to you on the farm. I can tell from its shape and general appearance that it will earn its board and keep."

Frankie and May were pleased to hear Miss Clark speak in such praise of their new-found pet, and after thanking her sincerely for her great kindness to them and their kitten they hurried home.

"Oh, my dears, what did you bring that kitten here for?" asked their mother on beholding the little furry creature held so closely in May's arms. "You know we have no real need of a cat, for the traps keep us well rid of mice, and Sport catches any rats that might bother the corn cribs or the chicken coops. So, what use can we have of a cat?"

"Well, mama, we may not need the kitten, but—the kitten surely has great need of us," said May. "You see, we found it mewing in the road this morning, and we couldn't leave it to starve or get killed. It has no home so we've got to give it one."

May's mother kissed her and replied indulgently: "You are a dear good-hearted little daughter. And my boy is just as good," she added, turning to Frankie. "So, since the kitten must needs have a home, and ours is a good one, let it be welcome. But you must not neglect it, my dear children. I shall leave its care to you. It must be fed and kept clean of fleas, you know."

"Oh, we'll watch it all right," declared Frankie. "Besides, it may prove to be of great value to us, for Miss Clark says it's a fine specimen of cat, and will prove worth its board and keep."

The mother laughed as she went on with her preparations for supper, and the children took the kitten into the back yard to introduce it to Sport, the dog. "He must be taught to understand that his realm is shared by a newcomer, and that he must be friendly with the joint-ruler," declared Frankie.

And so the spring had worn away, and the summer had followed it, early fall setting in. But the kitten was no longer at the home of Frankie and May. A great cat—by name "Pussy"—was there. And, as you may have guessed, this same Pussy had once been that little kitten that was found one morning on the roadside crying: "Mew, mew, m-e-w-w!" How she had grown one could hardly guess. When Pussy was three months old she was so fine and big that Frankie and May had given her a birthday party, inviting Miss Clark, several of the neighbor children, old Sport, and the canary. Pussy had been taught to recognize the rights of the canary just as Sport had been taught to recognize the rights of Pussy.

But now, in her seventh month, Pussy had done nothing to show that she was earning her board and keep, as Miss Clark had predicted she would do. To be sure, she was a great pet and afforded the children a lot of pleasure. And Sport had found her very companionable after the first few days of antagonistic spitting and claw-showing. But she had never been seen with a mouse, nor had she shown any disposition to guard the chickens from the hawks that came down to menace them, although both Frankie and May had repeatedly tried to train her to do so.

And so she had arrived at a pretty good age without having done anything to cover herself with glory. She was a nice, sleek, good-natured and affectionate cat. And that was about all one could say of her. Nevertheless, she was a decided favorite, and no one thought her in the way or begrudged her the sweet milk she drank or the bits of meat she ate.

However, there came a time when Pussy proved herself well worthy the splendid home she had been made a member of.

It was a September night, cool and clear. But owing to the frost in the air Pussy had been given a snug place in the cellar to sleep. And when Frankie and May put her bed there they thought it a fine place for her as the mouse trap had been down there so long that the mice had grown to know it held great peril for them, and in consequence they had stopped nosing at the nice sweet cheese placed in the trap so temptingly, but satisfied themselves with nibbling at the edibles that were put on the numerous shelves in the cellar.

After being left alone for a time Pussy decided to go about on an exploring expedition. She did not rummage about very long, however, for a queer, smothering odor filled her nostrils. In the corner where Frankie and May had fixed her bed there was a stream of something black rearing itself toward the ceiling. And shortly afterward a little tongue of red, glowing and giving light to the cellar, leaped after the vaporous cloud that was growing and filling the entire room.

Now, Pussy knew that something was wrong, and radically wrong, too. She found it hard to breathe and something made her eyes sting. She went up the cellar steps at a bound and began mewing lustily and scratching at the door which held her a prisoner. How long she scratched and mewed she had no way of knowing, of course, but it probably seemed a long time to her in that densely suffocating atmosphere.

Now, May's room was right at the head of the stairs on the second floor, and the door which Pussy fought so hard against was directly beneath the stairs and opened into the first-floor hall. As May slept she dreamed she heard some one knocking at her door. Then she dreamed Pussy was at her side mewing. She awoke with a start and sat up in bed to make out what the noise was that seemed to come from the hall down stairs. Yes, she could hear it plainly. It was Pussy mewing with all her might and scratching and throwing her body against the frail wooden door of the cellar stair. May bounded out of bed and ran into her mother's room, saying: "Pussy is fighting to get out. I'm afraid a big rat has got into the cellar and has had a fight with her, injuring her badly, maybe. Come, mama, and go with me to let Pussy out."

"Oh, it's just Pussy's dislike to her new quarters," laughed May's mama. "But since you will be worried all night unless we let her out— But, what's that? It smells like smoke!" And in another instant both of May's parents were hurrying down the stairs with May and Frankie in the rear. Frankie, whose room adjoined his parents', was awakened by their excited voices and had sprung out of bed to ascertain what was the matter.

"It's coming from the cellar!" exclaimed the children's father, and he opened the cellar door to be met by Pussy, half suffocated, and a volume of smoke. And then it was found that quite a fire was burning in the corner close to the stove ashes that the servant had carelessly dumped there. The ashes had evidently contained some live coals that had ignited a pile of old lumber and papers.

It required the combined efforts of both parents and children to extinguish the flames, and to restore order once more in the cellar.

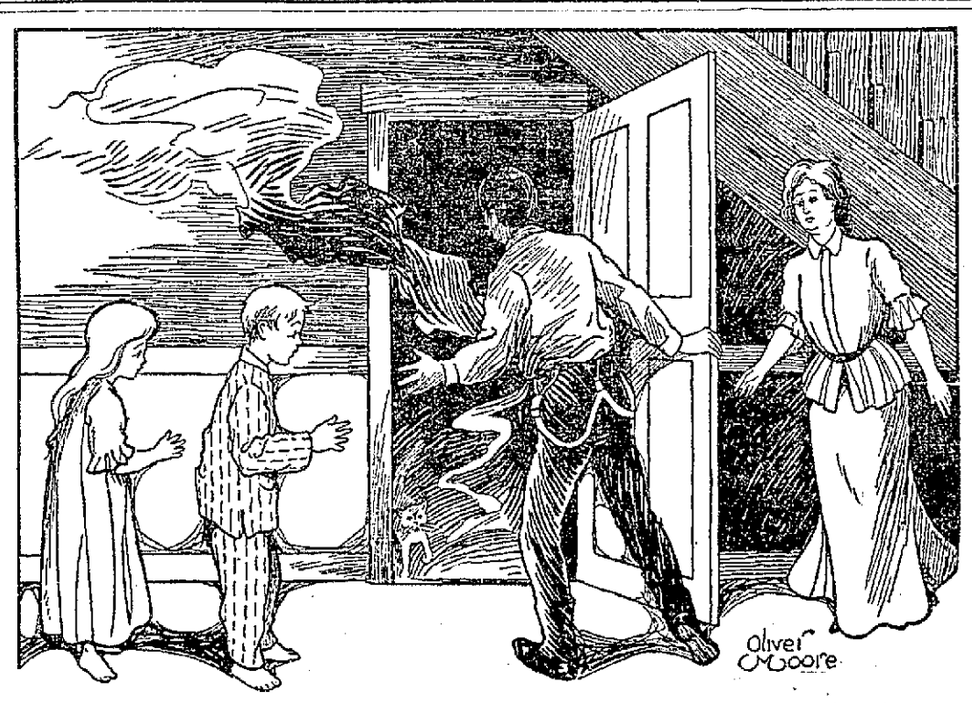
"If that fire had got another ten minutes start of us," said the father, "it would have been impossible for us to have saved the house. It had almost reached the well-seasoned fire-wood a few feet away. Once that had got started the entire house must have burned to the ground."

"And it might have cost the lives of some of us, had we been sound asleep," shuddered the mother, resting from her labors, her face covered with grime and perspiration. "You see, it would have cut us off from the stairs and the smoke would have suffocated us. My, what a narrow escape!"

"And did you stop to think to whom we owe our escape?" asked May. "None other than dear old Pussy. She awoke me by her scratching so furiously on the door and mewing so loudly. So we owe our lives, maybe, to her. And surely, we owe to her our nice and comfortable home."

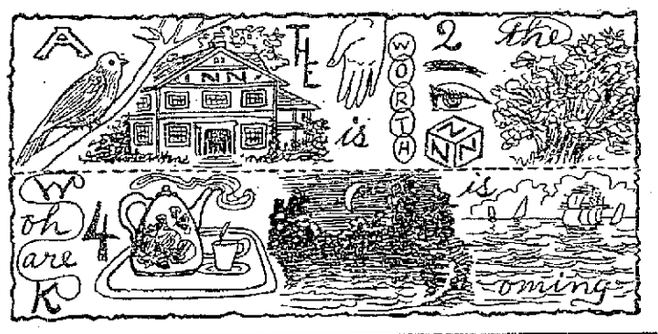
"Which all goes to show that Miss Clark knew what she was talking about when she said Pussy would yet make herself well worth her board and keep. Long life and much good milk to old Pussy, I say!" And the parents and May joined Frankie's enthusiastic praise of old Pussy who had that night, all unwittingly, been the means of saving the lovely home, and human life, perhaps.

And from that night to the present day old Pussy has been the favorite four-footer about the farm where she lives so happily, and it is safe to say that she cannot understand why she is made so much of by the family and the family's friends, especially old Miss Clark who will insist on saying, "I told you so."



He opened the cellar door to be met by Pussy, half suffocated, and a volume of smoke.

Two Old Proverbs:



Irish Wit.

O'Rourke's employer became talkative about his ancestry one day, telling the jolly Irishman that his forefathers came over in the Mayflower.

"Whin was that, plase, soir?" asked O'Rourke, much interested.

The Mayflower descendant gave the date, to which O'Rourke replied with a poor disguise of contempt:

"Why, soir, beggin' yer pardon, yer family was a mere mushroom of yeste'day. I lately seen inside of a family pedigree that filled hundreds of pages, and near the middle of it it says: 'About here the Lord created Adam.'"
